The New Football.

During the past two months advocates and opponents of football and those who regard it dispassionately as a human activity, to be reckoned with and understood, have had opportunity to see it played under the new rules. For some years educators and parents objected that the game was morally and physically injurious. Some good players, frank enough to brave the charge of disloyatry, confessed that the game was all work orave the charge of disloyalty, confessed that the game was all work and little sport. Speciators protested that the play was a formless struggle of massed power, not intelligible, nor pleasant to watch, except for thrills of partizan loyalty. After long conference the rules were changed. It is evident that the changes were real and in the right direction. The play is now more open. There is more chance for agility and speed, less scrimmage and shock of mere weight and muscle. The players cover more ground in a given series of plays. Offenses against good conduct are easier for the officials to see and puneasier for the officials to see and punish than in the old dense formations. From all sarts of the country come expressions of satisfaction with the improvement. Speciators find it more interesting to watch. Players seem to enjoy it better. Besides observing the formal rules of the game, players have felt that football was on trial, and have evidently tried to show a good spirit. Several prominent educators who opposed the old game think that the new game has earned that right to an extended probation. There is room for further improvements, remarks the Youth's Companion. Undestrable roughness is still on. easier for the officials to see and pun There is room for further improvements, remarks the Youth's Companion. Undesirable roughness is still possible. Those whose duty it is to frame the rules can proceed on the basis of this year's experience toward a yet better game. The real faults lie in loss of temper under excitement and the presence of a spirit which drives contestants to try to win at all costs. Football cannot be made a satisfactory game by mere changes in its outward form; real improvement must be in the spirit of the contest.

To Work Together.

To Work Together.

An address before a woman's club is not the place, nor is the president of the National Federation of Women's clube the source, from which men look for understanding of their work and methods. Nevertheless, a vote of cordial appreciation and commendation has lately come from that place and that source. "The man makes the best club-woman," said the speaker. "Men get things done, and shey are so fine and loyal." Did they are so fine and loyal." So take one another for granted. Here, indeed, is one respect in which men have opportunities to excel, remarks. Youth's Companion. Their business life brings them into contact with men of all sorts of religious beliefs, of various nationalities and all shades of 'cultivation and attractiveness; and the club life and political life of men is marked by the same characteristics. The effect is a growth of tolerance which makes for practical achievement as well as for comfort and the anenities of life. Many mes and they can agree to work with others for one thing in which they are interested, although they may differ radically on other things. "That other for one thing in which they are inter-eated, although they may differ radi-cally on other things. "That other woman, that woman who is so differ-ent from you, who is a little less cul-tivated, a trifle 'mpossible,'". said the president of the federation, "she, too, belongs to this movement, and we must let her in."

Novelists, some of whom may never have owned a dress coat, used to be fond of drawing, in their tales, a sharp social distinction between persons who "dressed for dinner" and those who did not. Now the editor of a British medical journal has been discussing and commending from a hygienic point of view the habit of gressing for dinner. Everyone knows that a change of clothing is often refreshing. The English editor believes that the effect is physical, as well as freshing. The English editor believes that the effect is physical as well as mental, or physical through the mental stimulus, and advises that even the hardworking clerk, the shopkeeper and the laboring man cast off their workaday clothes and put on clean elothing for the evening meal, when the toil of the day is over.

RIOT AT THE ARMY MANEUVERS

OF THE OHIO ENCAMPMENT AT-

And Foraker Forces, Who Are Seeking Data—Regulare Ruthlesaly Shot State's Militiamen.

Athens, O. Dec. 28.—The celebrated riot in this city during the military maneavers in 1804 is to Spure in the contest between President Rosevetit and Senator J. B. Foraker over the discharge of the colored battalion, of c. 25th regiment because of the Brownsville "shooting up." It became known that both sides to the controversy are securing transcripts of the records of the case in the office of Prosecuting Attorney Israel M. Foster to be used in the argument before the committee on military affairs, if an investigation is ordered by the senate. It will be remembered that this riot culminated in a detachment of regulars shooting down one of a picket. It will be remembered that this riot culminated in a detachment of regulars shooting down one of a picket of soldiers of the sixte and wounding others. The consequence was the summoning of a grand jury, which indicted several of the regulars on the charge of murder. At that time the war department appeared to side with the soldiers to such an extent as to cause public protest, which went unheeded.

Letter of Protest.

An investigation was held, in which it was plainly evident that an effort was being made to throw the blame upon the millitis. When the indicted soldiers were arratgated for trial they were defended in part by representatives of the army. This caused Congressman Charles H. Grosvenor tasch a letter of protest to Washington, in which he bitterly declared that it was the first time in history that the power of the government was being used to defend and protect murderous blackguards. Gen. Grosvenor was retained by the state, and succeeded in securing a conviction of the culprits.

It is understood that the first advance toward securing the evidence and other records was made by those in league with Senator Foraker. The purpose is to show that the secretary of war has not, according to the negrosoldiers, shown the same sympathetic treatment as was shown their white brether in this city. Naturally, there, are many who believe that Gen. Grosvenor was very Rosewelt Active.

Following the inquiry on the part of the representative of Sentor Foraker came a second one from the other side, indicating that the movement had been penetrated, and that the president's representative were securing the evidence to protect themselves against any surprise. There is no gainsaying the fact that at the time of the trouble and during the trial the public in general believed that the war-departmentwas endeavoring to clear the accused men, even in face of the fact that the shooting was unprovoked and brutal in the extreme, and that their act endangered the lives of many innocent people. Of course, it is to be understood that the charge is a double-barreled one, as Secretary Taft was then in charge of the war department.

Chinese Superior to Japa.

Discussing the hitle rumpus with Japan, Senator William A. Clark erpresses the opinion the Chinese in this country are superior to the Japanese. "I have loaned thousands of dollars to Chinamen," said the senator, "and never have I known one to fall to meet his obligations." He emphasized his opinion as to the superiority of the Chinamen by calling attention to the fact that the Japanese in their banking institutions employ Chinamen in positions of trus in preference to their ewa countrymen.

Keep Your Blood Pure.

No one can be happy, light-hearted and healthy with a body full of blood that cannot do its duty to every part because of its impurity; therefore, the first and most important work in hand is to purity the blood so that every organ will get the full benefit of a healthy circulation. There is no remedy, brandreth's Pills. Each pill comtains one grain of the solid extract of astragarilla blended with two grains of a combination of pure and mild vegetable products, making it a blood purifier unexcelled in character. One or two taken every night for awhile will produce surprising results.

Peru Claims Kuroki.

Gen. Kuroki, the famous Japanesesoldier, has been variously described as of Polish, Russian and German extraction. Another interesting chapter has been added to this genealogical symposium by an official publication in the Official Gazette, of Lima, Peru, which makes the claim, and submits a plausible statement of facts to proveit, that Kuroki's father was a Peruvian patriot whose name was TransitoCharroqui. It is also-declared thatthe general's father was a descendant of the Incas, who themselves are believed to have been descendants of an Asiatic race, so -Kuroki is an ataviam

Prominent on Lecture Platform.

Senator Tillman probably earnsmore money every year on the lecture platform than any other American. who talks to the public for pay. From an authoritative source the statement comes that the South Carolinian's net proceeds thus far this year from his lecture tour are $25,000. Senator Tillman is paid from $250 to $500 a lecture and he is constantly in demand. His season is not confined to the summary Chautauqua course and he fills useanly as many dates in the winter as at any other time of the year. In the last four years it is said that he has laid aside over $60,000 from his lecture receipts. Henry Watterson perhaps comes next in the matter of earnings on the platform. Champ Clark, of Missouri, ranks high as a popular favorite and makes about twice as much as a lecturer as his congressional salary.

In an interview at Topeka, Kansas, on the 27th inst., W. J. Bryan said: "While I have not yet announced that I would be a candidate for the Presidency, I have not stated that I will not be a candidate, and do not intend to. Such a high honor as a Presidential nomination is something that no American citizen should decline." If this interview is correctly reported it can safely be said that Mr. Bryan is again a candidate.

Duking the Congressional campaign, last fail, Senator Foraker mide a speaking tour in which ne called upon the Republicans to support their party nominees that a Congress which would support President Roosevelt might be elected, but the Senator has forgotten what he so carnestly advocated and is now the leader in a revoltagainst the President. The late annual report of the Department of Agriculture shows the wonderful accretion of wealth in this country, and the fact that this industry leads all others. The farm values amount to S6, 794,000,000, an increase of $485,000,000 in one year. It shows an increase of two millions of dollars over the estimate of 1899. No other industry will compare with this, and when talking about the great prosperity in the United States, bear in mind that it is due very largely to agriculture.

Letington, Ky.—Although three years have passed since the Goobs! monument commission contracted for the building of a monument and statue of the late Gov. William Goobel to dorn his grave in the Frankfort cemetery, the work is still unfinished, and Nehaus, the New York sculptor who dosigned the figure of the dead statesman, is unable to collect his calam. This fact became known through Aircray Charles J. Bronston, who has been retained by the artist to bring sault against William Adams & Sons, a local monument firm, for the amount due him. The commission entered into a contract with Adams & Sons for the entire work, and reserved the right to accept the statue only after it had been cast in bronze. Adams in turn let the contract for the statue to Signor Moretti, who gave up the Job after a year's labor in which he was unable to make a plaster model of the dead governor which met the requirements imposed upon him by Arthur Goebel and the other members of the commission. It-was then that the committee amended the contract with Adams, in which It reserved the light to pass upon the work only after that been cast in bronze. when young John was growing up he had always sought to dodge a talk from the governor. But after he had spent a few years of running the point of his piow into live roots as he broke new ground in business he began to learn that the old gentieman could teach him something. In time he lung upon every chance he had to listen to the business wiedom of his father. Experience teaches. The hald head know more than the one that still has fuzz clinging to its temples. So this evening the son listened with eager ear to his father. "Yes, son, work will do more toward putting you ahead than anything clse. CHOOSING A NEW MINISTER.

Why Some Were Never Rejected; Also Why No. 5 Was Favored.

Why Some Were Never Rsjected; Also Why No. 5 Was Favored.

Also Why No. 5 Was Favored.

The faithful old parson had died after 30 years' preaching, and perhaps the newer methods had begun to creep in, for it seemed impossible to suit the two communities most interested in the choice.

Rev. Mr. Davis, for example, was a sprited preacher, but persisted in keeping two horses in the parsonage stable, and in exchanging them whenever he could get faster ones. As a parcehial visitor he was incomparable, dashing from house to house with such speed that he could cover the parieth in a single afternoon. This sporting tendency, which would never have been remarked in a British parson, was frowned upon in a New Eagland village, and Deacon Milliken told Mr. Davis, when giving him what he alluded to as his "walking papers," that they didn't want the church run by hoss power!

The fact candidate pleased Edgewood, where morning preaching was held, but the other parish, which had afternoon service, rejected him because he wore a wig—an ill matched, crookedly appiled wig.

Number three was eloquent, but given to gesticulation, and Mrs. Jere Burbank, the president of the Doreas society, who sat in a front pew, salch couldn't bear to see a preacher scramble—round the pulpit, hot Sundays.

she couldn't bear to see a preacher scramble fround the pulpit hot Sundays.

Mumber four, a genial, handsome man, gifted in prayer, was found to be a Democrat. The congressation was overwheiming! Republican in its politics, and perceived something ludicities, and perceived something the Gospel. ("Ananias and Belezbeuh 'il be candidated bere, first thing we know!" exclaimed the outraged Republican nominee for district attorney.)

Number five was Rev. Judson Raxter, the present incumbent, and he was voted to be as near perfection as a minister can be in this finite world. His young wife had a small income of her own, so the subscription committee hoped that they might not be eternally driving over the country to get somebody's 60 cents that had heen overdue for eight months, but might take their onerous duties a little more easily.—Kate. Origin of Game That Is Popular the World Over.

With regard to the game of dominose there is a very interesting story connected with its origin. It runs thus: There were two monks who had been committed to the pensity of a long seclusion and were consequently as howing each other small sat stones marked with black dots. By a well-understood arrangement, the monk whose hand was used at first informed the other player by repeating in an understone the direct line of the vesper hymn, "Cantate Domino" (Sing unto the Lord). In time the monks completed the set of stones and formulated the rules of the game, so that by the time they were free to come out from their purchamment they had found the game so interesting that on teaching it to the other members of the monastery it became a favorite and is wfull pastime. It soon became popular all though its became after the monks had used as a signal was reduced to the world domino, and the name has stuck to the game ever since.

"I had eczema on my hands for about elevên years. The hands crack-ed open in many places and bled. One of my fingers was so bad that the nail came off. I had often heard of cures by the Cutleura Remedies, but had no confidence in them as I had tried so many remedies, and they all had falled to cure me. I had seen three doctors, but got no relief. Finally my hugband said that we would try the Cutleura Remedies, so we got a cake of Cutleura Soap, a box of Cutleura Olntment, and two bottles of Cutleura Resolvent Pills. Of course I keep Cutleura Soap all the time for my hands, but the one cake of Soap and half a box of Cutleura Colntment to my hands well, and I am very proud of having tried Cutleura Remedies, and recommend them to all suffering with eczema. Conference of Politicians.

Four years ago, when ex-Gov. Odeli, of New York, was coming up for a renomination at the convention in Saratoga, there was a plan to put a man on the ticket with him for leutenant governor to whom Odeli objected strongly. The governor's father, 88 years old, a deacon in the church and very strict in religious matters, was in Saratoga. There was a conference at one of the hotel cottages that iasted until late in the morning. The other leads see were trying to force Odeli to take the ohnoxious man.

About two o'clock Odeli's father, who had heard what was going on, stalked angrily over to the cottage and rapped on the door. Frank Platt, son of Senator Platt, came to the door. "Well?" said Platt sharply, "I want to see my son," demanded Odell.

The first Japanese youth to he admitted to the crew of the schoolship St. Mary's is Katzern Artyoshi. Artyoshi, who is 17 years old, has been in the revenue cutter service on the Pacific for the last three years.

He succeeded in getting Capt. Osborn to act in that capacity. Capt. Osborn will coach the hoy along and help him over the hard points in his lessons.

The progress of a new country cannot be better accretiated than by not-ing the increase of railroad mileage in its transportation system, and, judged by this standard, the Canadian West leads all the countries in the world during the current year. Such an increase in the transportation facilities of the country is bound to make good times not only in the districts where the railroads are being built, but throughout the entire west. Allowing $2,000 a mile for construction, the sum of $100,000,000 will be put in circulation, and this in itself should cause good times to prevail in a land where work is plentiful, wages are high, and the cost of living is moderato.

A dispatch from Washington anys that a report from the office of Public Roads, a branch of the Department of Agriculture, shows that there are 57,137 miles of public road in the State of Kentucky, of which 1,408 miles were surfaced with gravel and 8,078 with stone, making in all 2,486 miles of improved road. Many of these roads have been built and—are maintained by turnpike companies, while others have been constructed by the counties from funds received from bond issues.

By comparing the total mileage with the area of the state it appears that there was 14 miles of public roads per square mile of area. A companison of mileage with population shows that there was one mile of road to every 37 inhabitants and one mile of improved road to every 226 inhabitants.

Notwithstanding the general talk of the meat scandal during the last calendar year figures for the first ten months of 1906, prepared by the Department of Commerce and Labor show exportations of meat and meat products to the value of 172 million dollars against 147 millions in the corresponding period of last year, a gain of 25 million dollars. More than 250 million worth of meat and dairy products will have passed out of the United States into the markets of other parts of the world in the year ending with last month. This enormous total of 250 million is made up of a little over 200 million dollars' worth of meats, 35 million dollars' worth of cattle, and about 10 million dollars worth of the state, and about 10 million dollars worth of butter, cheese and milk.

Man's Span of Life Lengthsting.
According to Sir Lauder Brunton, writing in the Lancet, the average length of life has rapidly become greater. There has been a continuous increase in the expectation of life from a little under 40 years in 1864 to a tinfe less than 48 years in 1864 to a tinfe less than 48 years in 1900." A gain of eight years in half a century appears tremendous, but the figures could be, of course, more significant still if we applied the comparison to two periods separated by several centuries. Here is a rather intangible, but certainly important element, that should enter into all our attempts at formulating historical perspectives. However unconscious the average mediaeval man may have been of what his worth as an insurance risk was at any particular time, his acts and thoughts must have been profoundly influenced by the fact that he had on an average 15 years less to live than his successor of the nine-teenth centry, says New York Post. The Volcience of primitive civilization may be due to the instinctive desire for getting as much satisfaction as possible out of a brief existence. Pos-Man's Span of Life Lengthering. may be due to the instinctive destre for getting as much satisfaction as possible out of a brief existence. Pos-sibly, we do not live longer in the twentleth century because we fight less; out we quarrel less because we altruism. Just so people step on each other's toes and scowl during the half-hour's expiation in the subway, but are polite and form lasting friend-ships on the commuter's train to and from New Brunswick. from New Brunswick.

English Duke's Patriotism.

The British nobleman responds to the demands of Imperial patriotism when they are called to his attention. The duke of Westminster is the latest of them to use his immense wealth in assisting to make the distant possessions of the empire Piritish in fact as well as in name. Two or three years ago his interest in South Africa was aroused by persons who thought years ago his interest in South Africa was aroused by persons who thought that more Englishmen ought to be attracted to that part of the world. The duke bought 19,000 acres of land in the Orange River Colony, built 18 farmhouses and the necessary farm buildings upon it, erected schoolhouses and other public buildings, and sent out all the machinery and tools needed to till the land and to prepare the crops for consumption.
Elghteen families have been put M
the, houses, and are now cultivating the soil and atterpring to establish a center of British influence and the nucleus of a large British settlement.
If the enterprise proves successful the nucleus of a large British settlement. If the enterprise proves successful the duke does not expect to net more than two per cent. Interest on his investment. But when the Orange River Colony is thickly settled the new district of Westminster—it is named after the duke—will yield large returns to future dukes.

Dr. Morrison, the well-known Br. astrison, the weighnown correspondent of the London Times at Pekin, went to see the recent maneuvers of the modernized Chinese array in the neighborhood of Changtefu. He describes them as a repetition of the performance of last year—a setplece carefully prepared long beforehand by a number of Japanese advisers. The general opinion formed by the military attaches was not, he says, unfavorable, though many years work without official jobbery will be needed before the troops can compare with those of more advanced nations. The inefficiency of the officers is still conspicuous, and the field training of the men inadequate, but the material is good. Dr. Morrison spondent of the London Times med material is good. Dr. Morrison hints pretty plainly that, without the Japanese to direct affairs, the contending armies would have been little better than a rabble.

The development of Alaska is continuing at a phenomenal rate. Direct proof of this furnished by the report showing the operations of the sovernment telegraph system in the territory. Receipts during the last few months have ranged from 50 to 100 per cent. more than last year, and the facilities are so inadequate that additions, are imperatively needed. The system includes more than 3,000 miles of cable and land lines, supplemented by wireless apparatus which bridges a gap of more than a hundred miles. The lines are being extended. In various directions, and before a great while will form a network which will bring all the habitable portions of the "Seward purchase" into touch with the rest of the world. Japan is planning to send a squadron of warships across the Pacific early next year to visit the western ports of the United States, on their way round the world. This will—be a long a voyage and the first to carry the Japanage flag on a warship into many harbors.

On the Hot Springs line there is a big washout at Baustie, and it is reported the heavy steel bridge over the Saline river is out of line. There are no wires west and the offices here can give no idea of the time when traiffic will be resumed.

The relief train started from Little Rock to Ledwigse with Superintendent. A. G. Merrill aboard, ran into a washout at West Lend, derailing the engine and three cars. The damage was repaired and the train proceeded to Ledwidge, where a large force of men attempted to crib the track. On the L. M. all trains south of Little Rock are out of business. The north-bound cannon-ball was caught between washouts and can not move.

Defense of His Home People Taker Up By Culbertson.

Washington. Jan. 4.—After two weeks of varation the senate sat for two and one-half hours and then adjourned.

The session was devoted entirely to the further-discussion of Prevident Roosevelt's order dismissing the negro troops of the 25th infantry for "shooting up" Brownsville, Tex. Senator Culbertson, of that state, defended the order, bringing to its 38-port many points of legal construction and justifying the action by many quotations taken in connection, with the affray.

He closed with an impassioned state meet—of—the position of the Kouth on the negro, question, which he declared to be the mont vital and danserous problem before the American people. Senator Foraker repiled briefly, expressing his intense interest in having speedy action on his resolution for an investigation.

That from Natural Springs is Generally Most Nearly Pure.

'The purity of salt depends upon the source from which it is obtained and the santiary conditions under which it is prepared for the market. The supply of common salt, the most indispensable of all the seasoning substances beth as a reliability condimentand a well-nigh universal food preservative, is exhaustless, yet even so there is salt and salt, says the Pictorial Review.

Formerly salt was obtained by evaporating ocean-water, a process-that left many impurities in the residuum, to say nothing of lies exposure to all kinds of dirt in its shigment from seaports. The Turk's island or rock salt, which is still largely used in pork packing and in the manufacture of lee creams, comes to the United States in holds of vessels-continually subjected to dirt and foul odors. Upon its arrival it is again handled, then packed in course burlap bags, permiting dust to sift into the salt. In this condition it reaches the consumer.

Latterly, however, the product of salt springs has largely taken the lead on this country not only for table salt but for meat packing. The annual production from this source in the United States reaches more than 40, one of the production of the suit of the vicinity of Syracuse furnishing a large proportion of this important supply.

ANIMALS THAT SHED TEARS

Travelers' Observations Have Proved That Weeping Is Common.

Travelers through the Syrian desert have seen horses weep from thirst, a mule has been seen to cry from the pain of an injured foot and camels, it is said, shed tears in streams, says a writer in Harper's Weekly. A cow sold by its mistress who had tended young sokp ape used to cry from vexation if Livingston didn't nurse it in his arms when it asked him to. Wounded spes have died crying, and appea have wept-over their young slain by hunters. A chimpanzee trained to carry water jugs broke one and fell-acrying, which proved sorrow, though it wouldn't mend the jug. Rats, discovering their young drowned, have been moved to tears. A giraffe which a huntsman's rifie had injured began to cry when approached. Sea lions often weep over the loss of their young. Gordon Cummings observed tears trickling down the face of a dying elephant. And even an orangowas so vexed that if took to weeping. There is a little doubt, therefore, that animals do cry from grief or weep from pain or annoyance. Travelers through the Syrian deser-

DEFEAT AND VICTORY AT AI

A STORY OF THE CONQUEST

Scripture Authority:-Joshua 8:1-23

SERMONETTE.

"Israel hath sinned." No, you say, it was not israel, but Achan. True, and yet only part of the tresh-for sin is never without its influence and effect upon the lives of others beside the actual transgressor.

Here is a solemn truth: "No man liveth unto himself slone," and the sins which I commit touch the lives of others. See it in the family circle. There is the profligate son, but he sins not to himself slone. There is the profligate son, but he sins not to himself slone. The whole family circle is swept into the vortex of his contaminating influence and feels the burden of his wrong-doing. Sin is a terrible thing, reaching out in ever widening circles and affecting the lives of others. Achan's sin became the sin of the whole people, and brought disaster upon all, just as your sin and my sin may work. Its baneful influence upon the lives of those closely related to us by social, business or family relations.

"And they field before the men Al." What is graphle portay.

by social, business or family reiations.

"And they fied before the men of Al." What a graphic portrayal of the weakening power of sin. Sampson shorn of his locks was powerless in the hands of his enemies, for those shorn locks were the evidences of sin in his life.

And many a man finds himself powerless to grappie with the enemy because sin has sapped his strength. Sad, is it not that thus man should invite defeat where God intended that victory should be his.

where God intended that victory should be his.

The defeats that we incur in the Land of Promise, says F. B. Meyer, are not necessary. They are due entirely to some failure in ourselves, and they cause grief to the immortal Lover of our souls.

There is no reason for defeat in the Christian life; always and everywhere we are meant to be more than conquerors."

The course of the Christian warriper should be as the sun when he goeth forth in his strength, and in regular gradients drives his chariot from the eastern wave up the steep of heaven.

Child of God, never lay the blame of thy failure on God; seek for it within!

THE STORY.

THE king of Al was naturally cruel and vindictive, and since his wertory over the armed force which is real- had sent out against his city, he had given free rein to his passionate nature. There were men in Al whom he had ruthlessly slain because in the panic which followed the news of the destruction of Jericho they had counscied the surrender of the city, urging that this was their only hope. "We cannot stand before their God," they had said. "Let us not fight against them, but let us go out and plead for mercy in the name of their God."

Such appeals served only to deep en and intensify the harred of the king towards this strange people who had invaded the land and towards their God, ann following his victorious return to the city after driving the army of Israel before him, he had or dered those men who had counseled urrender to be sian. And the days hich followed had been bloody days in Ai. Referitlessly he searched the city for any who had surrender, and had them executed in the public square as an example to others in the city, for said he:

"Al is made weak by their presnee. Death to all who would fear before Israel or bow down to their God! Our gods be the true gods! We will serve them!"

And so the days following the deat of Israel had been bloody feasts days in Ai, for with the killing of those who had incurred the king's lispleasure, the whole city had given see even we one even be or of excesses.

Thus confidently the king and his great army hastened forward, and almost before they had come within striking distance of their enemies the latter broke ranks and fied away in terror, as they had done on the former occasion. With a flere, wild shout, the king and his whole army took up the pursuit. Throwing aside the heavier parts of their armor that they might run the more swiftly, the king and his made and the reason in the rear sent into the air a veritable cloud of arrows. But these latter fell short of the fleeing lines of the larselites, for they had aiready secured a good lead. On, on, pursued and pursuers went, until a warning cry of mingled fear, and dismay caused the king to look back.

What was that lurid glare in the

and dismay caused the king to look back.
What was that lurid glare in the heavens? That was not the sunrise!
No! For the sun at that very moment was rising in the other quarter of the heavens, and his dull red glow seemed to pale before the brighter, flercer light which rowned the hill on which their city stood. Plames leaped and curied upward as though striving to see which could first reach the blue vaults of the sky, while the clouds of smoke crept lazily aeross the horizon. The king's heart stood still. With pale face and wildly-staring eyes, be watched the terrible sight. He and his army were dazed by the spectacle, and fairly paralyzed with fear. "What could it mean? Each man asked himself. And then as they saw an unlittude of men rising on every hand and rushing down the hill towards them, and heard behind them a warning shout as the fleeding Israelites turned and came back at them, they became panic-stricken and broke ranks, and field in every direction.

The king and his bodyguard sought.

Israelites turned and came back at them, they became panic stricken and broke ranks and fled in every direction.

The king and his bodyguard sought refuze in the thick undergrowth and made their way as rapidly as they could toward the north, where they hoped that they would be able to find some friendly ally that would take them in and give them shelter.

Bitter were the thoughts of the king as he thus made his way, torn and bleeding and weary. The thorns goaded his feels and the interiacing boughs and branches seemed to be doing their utmost to delay him and give him into the hands of his emmics. But not the hands of his emmics are not seen to be doing their utmost to delay him and give him into the hands of his emmics. But notwithstanding the difficulties and perlis which surrounded him, his heart was still defant, and he promised himself that if he could but reach safety with some of the heighboring nations to the north, he would some day return with a powerful army and have his revenge upon these dogs of Israelites, who refused to mingle with the peoples about them and worshiped an unseen God.

In the meantime Joshua and his army had taken up the pursuit cagerly, remembering the words of the Lord that they, should destroy the people utterly. Some of the men who served close to Joshua had marked the place where the king had stood with his men, and now rashed for ward determined on his capture. It was not difficult following the trait through the underbrush, while the king and the men with him remained dogether, but as the pursuit had become more fierce and the Israelites were close upon them, they scattered, and the king was left to go his waj sione.

When the Israelites came to the place where the king and men had alone.

When the Israelites came to the place where the king and men had separated they were puzzled to know just what to do, for they were determined that the king of all others should not escape.

"But has not God told us that we must utterly destfoy them and will be not help insto do that which he has commanded." exclaimed one.

This encouraged, they scattered and followed as best, they could the trails left by the fleeling men. Now each man was eager to win the glory, of capturing the fugitive king, and so when they burst through the underbrush into an open field and saw the king before them, they all left the pursuit of the others and followed hard after him, unmindful even of one of the king's men who could be seen making his way just on the other side of the open space.

Should they all in their cagerness to capture the king and share in the glory thereof let this fellow escape? was the thought that smote the heart of one of the Israelites, the one who had so confidently declared that the Lord would help them.

By way of answer he resolutely turned assite and took up the pursuit of this other fugitive, while the rest continued to follow the king.

Inagine his surprise, therefore, whe' at last he overtook the man, and hade him captive to discover that it was none other than the king him self, who, hoping to divert—pursuit from himself, had exchanged clothing with one of his men.

And so he who in faith ad sought to perform the commandments of the Lord, was granted the favor of bringing to Joshur the king of the 'strick en city, and Joshua haanged him on a tree until eventide, not as soon as the sum was down, Joshua commanded that they should take his careass down from Coo tree and cast it at the entering of the gate of the city. And they raised thereon a great heap of stones as a testinonial against all those who would dishonor God and destroy his people. those who had meaner of excesses.

Such was the state of things when one evening word was brought to the king that armed farseitles were seen to enter the valley below the city, and were making their camp-in-plaint view of the city. Immediately the comparent of the city is an an an an an armed sample of the city is an an armed sample of the city. Immediately the king went out and from the high tower on the walls at the city's gaty as watched the little army make its position secure for the night tower on the walls at the city's gaty as watched the little army make the camp, but the king with an oath forbade, saying:

"Nay, for in the darkness they would flee and many would escape. On the morrow early we will surround and destroy them. None shall escape."

So it was that on the morrow early the king and all the men of Alfor every man was eager for opportunity of falling then the largeities—issued forth from the gates and descended upon the little army gathered in the valley below.

"We will pursue them to the very the continued to follow the king.

Gossip of Washington

Interesting Information Gathered at the Nation's Capital-Supreme Justice Moody's Interview with the Court Mociste-President to Cleanse City's Underworld.

WASHINGTON.—One of the first acts of Abtorney Genereal Moody after being sworn in as a member of the supreme court of the United States was to have an interview with the court modister. Washington boasts of a modister "by appointment" to the court, but, unlike the dreasmakers of European courts, this particular modiste caters only to men, and among men only to the justices of the supreme court of the United States. Naturally, her business is not large enough to employ assistants, but her patronase "s distinguished The supreme court for the United States. Naturally, her business is not large enough to employ assistants, but her patronase "s distinguished The supreme court is the greatest stickler for he supreme court is the greatest stickler for he black with gown only after he has been sworn in. When Mr. Moody ascended the bench to the business of the court of the court of the court field of the word of making these gowns, and she has been at it for years.

It is not known whether a new justice goes through some preliminary trainings as women are coached in the manipulation of a court train before presentation, but the solemn procession to the bench is never marred by any undignified movement.

Mr. Moody will pay $100 for his gown. But he will not have to order a new one until he is promoted to be chief justice, as a gown never wears out. The gown of the chief justice is distinguished from that of an associate justice by being made of Chinese sath instead of black silk. Whenever the chief justice swears in a president he is expected to provide himself with a new gown in honor of the occasion.

SCIETY HAS GOOD JOKE ON MOODY.

Speaking of Moody, Washington society is having a little fun, and not altogether quiet fun at his expense. The joke is thought to be better than anything else that has come along since a great New York paper printed the pictures of Count du Chambrun and several other Washington diplomats and labeled them with the names of the cooks of several families of wealth.

There is another picture which shows a most charming young girl, possibly 18 years old. Under the picture one reads that it is the likeness of Mrs. Robert Shaw Oliver, wife of the assistant secretary of war. The picture, however, shows the happy and winning countenance of Miss Durand, daughter of Sir Henry Mortimer Durand, the British ambasador.

In yet another picture there appears the form and the face of an exceednicity young cavatryman is Gen. Robert Shaw Oliver, the assistant secretary of war. Gen. Oliver is a veteran or several wars. The picture is that of young Phil Sheridan.

Fame certainly comes to Mr. Moody in these pictures. There is one which represents a field box at the game, and the inscription placed upon the picture tells that the box is the one occupied by "Secretary of the Navy Moody." As the world knows, Mr. Moody has not been secretary of the navy thor represented the department at the football game in the absence of Secretary Charles J. Bonaparte.

ROOSEVELT TO RID CAPITAL OF SLUMS.

Washington is to be cleared up.

Before leaving the White House the president expects to inaugurate a programme which will rid the capital city of the slum districts, which, according to the report of a special commissioner employed by the president, are worse from the standpoint of morality and cleanliness than similar areas in New York Chicago, or any of the other large American cities.

No expense is to be spared in this improvement, which is to be one of the most comprehensive in the general plan of making Washington the ideal "city beautiful."

"Already one bit has been introduced that calls for an expenditure of 100,000, though the dittinate completion of the pism will call for that amount.

the special section that will be wiped out of existence is the site of the mer camp occupied by Gen. Hooker's men during the civil war. According to the report of James B. Reynolds, of New York, who made investigation for the president, this place is the most undesirable in the

According to the report of James B. Reynolds, of New York, who made the investigation for the president, this place is the most undestrable in the city.

President Rossevelt has been greatly aroused by the Reynolds report and he is determined to abolish those conditions at any cost and it is expected that he will make this the subject of a special message to congress in the near future. It is planned to wipe out this blot by a government purchase of the entire section which lies south of Pennsylvania avenue, abutting the post office department and the new Municipal building on the north and being separated from the Wike House lot on the west by the width of Fifteenth Street.

W. Reynolds discovered blind alleys, filling perconductions.

ing separated rion the wine rouse iot on the vest of the wind of riferent street.

Mr. Reynolds discovered blind alieys, filthy regro hovels, dives of all kinds which have been segregated into that section until it has become one of the worst plague spots in the country. At night everything is wide open. There has been a lot of quite criticism almost at the president because he had failed to take any action looking to the cleaning up of this section, which is almost in plain view from the White House windows. While he has been suggesting reforms and improvements in such conditions in the larger cities, it has been pointed out that it would be a good thing to begin the cleaning up process right here in Washington.

HISTORIC LONG BRIDGE TO BE REPLACED.

Long bridge, the historic old wooden structure across the Potomac, connecting link between the capital and the south, is being to, a down. A modern steel bridge has been completed to take its nlace.

capital and the south, is being its. a down. A modern steel bridge has been completed to take its place.

With the bridge will go one of the oldest landmarks around the city. Every period in the history of the capital draws some of its interest from the framework of the joid structure.

In the war of 1812, when it was reported that the British fleet was approaching the capital, thousands of volunteers from southern states rushed across the bridge to defend. Washington, Many first families of Virginia moved bag and bagsage to this city when it was said the British were coming.

In the civil war the first soldiers of the federal army to enter Virginia crossed the bridge. For many days after the outbrack of hostilities in 1861 a company of Rhode Island soldiers granded the Washington end while the Washington Idight infantry occupied the Virginia end.

On the day of the battle of Bull Run thousands of men from the federal army, routed and ilsorganized, retreated to the capital by way of the bridge, followed almest to the Potomae by the confederates. The roadway of the bridge on that day was blocked with the fleeling mion soldiers and horses and carriages of officials at Washington who had driven into Virginia to witness the battle. Many of them narrowly escaped capture.

Veterans of the Army of the Potomac under Gen. Meade, May 23, 1865, marched across this bridge to their homes in the north. On the following day the victorious thousands of the Army of Tennessee and Georgia, with Gen. Sherman at their head, entered the city.

The Long bridge was used by the Southern railway, the Chesapeake & Oho, and the Ariante Coast line for southern traffic. The bridge was originally opened May 20, 1809, and cost $100,000. It has several times been destroyed by freshets and ice Troubling Cosl Dealers Who Get Their Of a Swindler, But Two Attorneys and Consignments By Rail.

Lexington, Ky. The Kentucky Tennessee Coal Desders' association was addiessed here by Delos Huil, of Chicago. He said to part: "The matter of short weight on cars has assumed so serious an aspect that it has actually become a factor in retail prices. Scarcely a dealer in the country ever receives a car that does not run anywhere from two tons to two and a half tons short. The demurrage question is also one of grave import. When the time limit for unloading cars was set, years ago, the cars held only 20,000 pounds of coal. Since then cars have been increased to 60,000 pounds capacity, so that we are now expect ed to unload three times as much coal in the same space of time as was originally allowed us in unloading the smaller cars. What we want to do is to secure some sort of legislation that will give us some such scheme as reciprocal demurrage, so that what ever time we shall save on one car may be credited to us in unloading the next." It is the intention of the Kentucky-Tennessee Coal Deslers' association to secure the enactment of state laws which shall be such as to guarantee correct weights from the producers to the consumers, and also to secure some sort of an agreement from the railroads granting reciprocity in demurrage. ## Balance in State Treasury Exceeds One Million.

Prankfort, Ky.—State inspector Henry B. Hines has "checked up" the anditor's and treasurer's records for the six months ending December 31, and found the books, warrants, checks and vouchers taillied to a dol, with a balance in the treasury of $1,486,918.46.
Of this amount $26,865,55 is in the sinking fund, $183,811,76 in general expenditure fund and $476,419.16 in the school fund. The revenue law enacted last year recibires that every authorized capital stock represented thy property owned and business transacted in this state." The secretary ofstate is now making out a list of all the corporations shown by records of chis office, which he will turn over to the auditor, who in turn is now notitying and sending blank reports to the corporations. These blank reports unst be filled cut and returned by the auditor by February 1. Approximately there are about 10,000 corporations doing business in Kentucky. Their total capital stock will amount to over $200,000,000,000, and it is expected the 30tent license tax will bring in at least $60,000 annually to the state treasury.

TREASURY IS OPEN

Once More Have Funds Belonging to the People of the United States Been Used to Assist Stock Gambiers.

The United States treasury has continued again and again to aid the Wall street bankers by depositing $10,000,000 with the reserve banks of the great cities and by redeeming bonds due in 1907. This action followed on the heels of anticipating interest on bonds which was not due until next year- which thus virtually released for banking purposes $14.6-970.145 of the government funds deposited in the favored banks upon which no interest is paid, which is being loaned, to the public at interest, rates ranging from 7 to 30 percent, the higher rate being for money "on call" in Wall street. Secretary Shaw also loaned the banks in the fail the necessary nillions to use for the importing of gold, while the gold was in transit, the National City bank on New York controlled by the Standard Cill trust, being the recipient of $20,000,000 or $30,000,000, without paying a cent of interest.

Tresident Roosevelt has, through the medium of a complimentary letter to Secretary Shaw, indorsed and commended this paternal system of helping, the hanks in early system of helping the hanks in early shaw indorsed and commended this paternal system of helping the hanks in the principal cities, yet practically all returns to the Wall street voice, where alone money rates are soarling far beyond the legal rates. That these government millions are drawn to Wall street is as certain as water unning down hill, for two reasons. First, because it, prevents, the hanks of other cities than New York calling for the money loays, which will continue uniti, at least, the middle of January, very naturally attracts all the fundathat can be spared by the banks and secondly the high-rate for money. In New York calling for stock-jobbing purposes. Such a system of financial operations for the benefit of Wall street in apply at all times, which is the recommendation of Secretary Shaw, and specond their surplus funds to participate in the exorbitant interest rates that are prevailing for stock-jobbing purposes. Such a system of financial operations and the w years, remarked a money broker yeasterday, "and have never found it so difficult to obtain funds as at the present time—not excepting. December, 1905. I flatter myself that I know the banklars community as well as the next one, and yet they all tell the same story—no funds. Where it with all end I would not venture to prophesy, but unless Sbaw comes to the rescue the only things which can restore equilibrium is liquidation of securities—and that most drastic." That wall from the stock broker gives an insight into the real conditions of the frenzied financiers—the dread of baving to sell the stocks they are holding for a rise. It is very evident that the government funds, deposited with the banks, are swallowed up in stock speculation, and the cry is still more money to move the crops. The principal crop to be moved is, however, the crop of watered stocks, with which the wall street banks and their trust magnates are so heavily loaded, which the dear public refuse to buy at the price demanded.

The fact that Dun and Bradstreet report - business—good and collections easy shows there is plenty of money for legitimate business, and the excuse of Secretary Shaw that bankers and business men all over the country are demanding that he ald the banks in moving the crops is, if true, created by the only ones really in trouble—the fre-Ledd financiers of Wall street.

The question for the people to set the fact has business and the state of Wall street.

The question for the people to set tie is, shall the United States treasury run in the interests of Wall street, with power continued in the hands of the Secretary of the Treasury—and he is asking for more power—to act as the national Santa Clausa and patternal distributor of presents of free joans to weathy capitalists at the expense of taxnavars?

It has become apparent that with the standpatters who coutrol the Re publican party, reciprocity is a mere device for refusing to reduce the tariling the standpatters who could be shall be shall be standpatters who could be shall be sha nsidiously Being Increased, Which Adds to Trust Prices.

The collection of tariff tax on imports should be a simple matter, but the Republican politiclers, acting in the interest of the protected monopolists, have purposely made the schedules intricate and conflicting. There are, at the port of New York alone, hundreds of entries of goods held upvery month by protests of importers because the appraisers are continually trying to impose higher duties, by having the goods entered under paragraphs of the tariff act other than those that similar goods have heretofore been entered under. Then there is the constant fight between the importers and the government officials about the declared value of the goods in the country of their origin. The protected trusts and monopolists bave, under this administration, as under former Republican administrations, controlled the appointment of the custom house officials, and trust interests have been subserved by 40 interpreting the law as to increase the duties paid on imports, in the manner mentioned, so as to allow our monopolists to increase the price of their products, with which the foreign imports competed. The higher, the tariff tax, the greater the price of trust products, with which the foreign imports competed. The higher the tariff at x, the greater the price of their products, and the interest-of-the trusts and combines that control the manufacture of home-made goods. There would not be so great reason for complain, if the increased cost of importing for immension to the control of the manufacture of home-made goods. There would not be so great reason for complain, if the increased cost of importing for immension to the control of the manufacture of home-made goods. There would not be so great reason for complain, if the increased cost of importing for immension to the control of the analysis of the Republican party for mutual advantage and protection.

To revise the tariff taw would strike at the expense of the American peopole?—Even the most rabid Republican protection of them, it would tend to greatly reduce the exorbit by the trusts, most of whom are paying large dividends on their watered stocks and bonds, and would thus reduce the cost of living which is now unnecessarily too high. Unless the tariff is revised, so that the cost of living is reduced, the wages and salaries of all classes must be fucreased to correspond with our enlarged expenses. It is entirely unfair that the few should monopolize prosperity at the expense of the many.

Republican Change of Heart.

"Trust-Busting" does not seem to be inherent in the Republican breast, but with pains and prodding they may acquire it. Debate in the senate a few days ago over the confirmation of Secretary Bonaparte exposed the fact that only a sbort time ago he had expressed the belief that concentration of ruliroads and the formation of trusts was inevitable and advantageous. Senator Culbertson of Texasreous Senator Culbertson of Texasreous Senator Culbertson of Texasreous. Senator Culbertson of Texasreous Senator Culbertson of Texasreous Senator Culbertson of Texasreous and the formation of the fact that the secretary was not a proper person to have charge of the department of Justice, which is supposed to be actively in the "trust-busting" business. Senator Knox defended Secretary Bonaparte and declared that he had "undergone a change of heart and would be found working as bard as anybody to bring the trusts under the arm of the law." The report of the senate proceedings says: "When some senator suggested that the views of many other Republicans on this particular subject had undergone something of a change, there was agental laugh." As Senator Knox is supposed to represent the steel trust and the great Pennsylvania railroad combination, the question is, who will vouch that his heart has undergone a change on the trust and corporation questions, for unless he has, some one who will stand as sponsor for him, his defense of Bonaparte is hardly convincing.

Where Does "Square Deal" Come Int In his speech in Boston Attorney General Moody said: "Mr. Have meyer, the sugar man, says that the tariff is the mother of trusts. It isn't the tariff that is the mother of trusts. It isn't is a the railroad rebate that is the mother of trusts and all its collatral relatives!" Mr. Moody does not exaggerate the evil of rebates. But he can scarcel; deny that the tariff is an indulgent guardien of the trusts, which permits them to make a profit from 40 to 100 per cent. more than they are entitled to by shutting out foreign competition.— Kansas City Times. VENTILATING A STABLE

It Can Be Done Without Draft and Cold.

To provide ventilation for a stable in a very coid climate it is well to have double windows. Make a wide frame and put one sash near the outer edge, leaving a dead air space eight to ten inches wide between the two. This arrangement will effectually bar out the coid and keep the warmth from passing out, for there is no more effective barrier for such purposes than perfectly dead air. The windows must be tightly fitted so as to prevent circulation of the air. Put in about three of these double windows on each side and two on each end. Put in the same number of fresh air intakes, six inches in diameter, after the manner shown in Fig. 1, and furnish each with a damper or cap so that it may be closed, or partly closed when the wind blows too flercely from any quarter.

For removing the cold and foul air, says Montreal Herald, locate a flue where it will be least in the way. Build it in one corner, as shown in Fig. 2, by enclosing 22 inches on each side and making an opening 20 inches, wide and same in helght. Make this flue practically air tight, just as one would build a chimney and let it extend well above the highest part of the roof.

HOME GROWN FEEDS

HOME GROWN FEEDS.

What Will Prove the Most Economical in Feeding the Cow.

The most economical feeds that I have been able to find for feeding dairy cows include corn, rye, peas, bran, clover hay and corn stover, writes a farmer in Farm and Home. The quantity will depend upon the size of the cow and sbould vary according to the amount of milk produced.

For the average cow, weighing around 1,000 pounds, and glving from. I would be amount of milk produced.

For the average cow, weighing around 1,000 pounds, and glving from. I would be amount for a dairy ration: Four pounds corn, three-fourths pound bran, 10-15 pound cow peas, 5-10 pound clover hay and all the corn stover that they will eat. Whenver I do not have the cow peas, I increase the amount of clover and add one to one and one-half-pounds cottonseed meal.

I think cow peas one of the best and most economical feeds for dairy cows that we have. The cows like them better than any other dry feed, and they are rich in protein. I always try to raise enough peas to feed my cows are fed in stalls and mangers similar to the Board's dairy stall, which is very satisfactory. In feeding, I think it best to be regular both as to quantity and time of feeding. Any lncrease or lessening of feed sbould be done gradually.

Sunshine will make the stables sweet. It is the cow that counts, not the name of the breed.

Its Use Does Not Render the Milk Sterile.

The use of formalin or formaldehyde in milk does not render that milk sterile, as many have supposed. Forzafin when combined with a certain proportion of water is called formaldehyde, and in articles and discussions is therefore practically the same, the difference being only in the strength of the solution used. Profa F. D. Chester and T. R. Brown, of the Delaware station, have been making some thorough investigations into the use of this preservative in milk. They assert their belief that if formaldehyde were used at the rate of one part of the formaldehyde to 40,000 parts of milk the results would not be injurious to the health of the persons using the milk, while the milk would know that the state of the professors on ont says, or renarks the Farmer's Review, but the got is that if milk men and other fact is that if milk men and other that the of the professors on ont says or the professor is not probability that they will have been called the say plications of the postoric in their applications of the professors are claused to use formalin at all there is no probability that they will not one part in 40,000. ### The Stanchion Persists

The Stanchion Persists.

In spite of all the preaching that has been done against it, the rigid stanchion still persists. Even some of those that declare against such means of tying cattle continue to use the method. One man that has been preaching against rigid stanchions was asked why he still had it in his barn. He replied: "Oh, I and my cows are old fogtes, and we still stick to the stanchion because we don't know any better." That may be his way of getting rid of the question, but the public has not yet heard from the cows in the case. If a man is determined to have a stanchion, it will pay him to put in swing stanchions, which certainly are more humane than the rigid stanchions.

Scours in Caives.

Scours in Calves.

The best remedy for scours in calves is not to have it. Begin preventive treatment with the cow. If she is a persistent milker, milk will naturally remain in the udder—all the time. Milk the cow dry and see to it that no milk is left it the udder; this is often a source of poison to the calf. If the calf is attacked when young, it is probably from that source.

HEAVY COAT SAVED HER LIFE.

Prefessor Garman and Wife Are At-tacked By Former Inmate of an Asylum.

Laporte, Ind., Jan. 3.—A narrow escape from death had the wife of Prof. Harry O. Garman. who, before her marriage, was Miss Ethel Hanly, daughter of J. Frank Hanly, governor of Indiana. Her husband is a son of former State Representative Noah Garman, and he is an instructor at Purdue university.

While driving in a carriage with her husband, father-fin-law and H. A. Garman, the latter a brother. William Coe.

While driving in a carriage with her husband, father-fin-law and H. A. Garman, the latter's brother, William Coe, who is alleged to be insane, emptled the contents of a shotgun at the party. That none of the party was seriously injured was due to the fact thai Coe was about 150 feet away from the carriage when he shert' and because all wore heavy wraps. The shot pierced the ouler garments of the men, but the greater part of the load was received by the governor's daughter, who was nearest Coe. However, it only penetrated her fur coat and drew no blood. The Garmans had attended a house party at the Garman country home, north of Laporte, over New Year's. The men at the house, including Rev. Roeder, Methodist minister of Rolling Prairie, went rabbit hunting. In the course of their wanderings they encewhered William Coe, whose farm, addions the Garman broad acres. Coe's team acted unruly and he claimed the shooting of the members of the hunting party had trightened the salumlas. He yowed he would get even.

his animals. He rowed he would get even.

Prof. and Mrs. Garman returned to Tafayette, and it was while they were being brought to the city by the former's father and brother that Coe endeavored to carry out his threat of gettine even. After the shooting they hastened to this city and reported the matter to Sheriff Smutzer, who dispatched Deputy Sheriff Anstiss to arrest Coe.

BRAIN DOES NOT THINK.

Those physiological and surgical facts which show that brain matter has itself in capacity for thought are of such recent discovery that only a relatively small number of persons—mostly specialists—have the least idea that the brain is never other than the instrument of what—in the present state of science—must be called the "person-ality." The personality is as different from, as separate from, the brain as the brain is never other than the instrument of what—in the present state of science—must be called the "person-ality." For it is the great man who makes the great brain and not the great brain which makes the man. This is another way of saying that we can make our own brains—so far as special functions or apitindes are concerned. Human brain matter does not become human in its powers, indeed, until the personality within takes it in hand to fashion it.

What is the "he himself" which thus takes the mechanism known as the brain and uses it for thought as a telegrapher would use a ticker and a series of wires for the transmission of messages? Which of these people are right? Is it more proper to call Peruna a catarrh remedy. Which of these people are right? Is it more proper to call Peruna a catarrh remedy has to call it a tonic?
Our reply in, that Peruna is both a tonic and a catarrh remedy. Indeed, there can be no effectual catarrh remedy that is not also a tonic.
In order to thotoughly relieve any case of catarrh, a remedy must not only have a generation on the muscus membrane affected by the catarrh, but it must have a great catarth, even in persons who are otherwise strong, is a weakened condition of some mucous membrane. There must be something to strengthen the circulation, to give tone to the arteries, and to raise the vital forces.

Perhaps no vegetable remedy in the world has attracted so much attention from medical writers as HYDRASTIS CANADENSIS. The wonderful efficacy of this herb has been recognized many years, and is growing in its hold upon the medical profession. When ploned with CUEBES and COPAIRA actir of medical agents is formed in Peruna which constitutes a specific remedy for catarrh that in the present state of medical progress cannot be improved upon. This action, reinforced by such renowned tonic as COLLINSONIA CANADENSIS, CORYDALIS FORMOSA and CEDRON SEED, ought to make this compound an ideal remedy for catarrh in all its stages and locations in the body.

Operator Gave Doomed Train Wrong Signal—Kept Orders in His Head —Was Incompetent.

Washington, Jan. 10.—At the conclusion of a mass of sensational teathmony in the coroner's inquest on this Terra Cotta wreek on the B. & O. Sunday, December 30, Coroner Nevit held to grand jury the following named persons: Harry H. Hildebrand, engineer of "dead" Train 2120; Frank F. Hoffmer, conductor of that train; P. F. Dent, night train dispatoher at Baltimore; William E. McCauley, division operator of the Baltimore & Ohio; B. L. Vermillion, engineer of local Train 66, into which 2120 crashed; George W. Nagle, conductor of Train 66; J. W. Kelly, fr. trainmanter of the B. & O., and William M. Dutrow, the telegraph operator at Silver Springs. All the men held, except Dent, McCauley and Kelly, were in the building where the inquest was held, and were placed under arrest.

The testimory given was of a starting nature, tending to point toward certain person as being responsible for the wreek, by a combination of incompetency, reclaies disregard of the competency, reclaies disregard of the circle, Inadequate rules and carelessness of certain official in placing in exportable positions.

The first witness at the inquest was rulea, inadequate rules and careleasness of certain officials in placing inexporienced men in most responsible Obstitions.

The first witness at the inquest was William L. Moore, the operator at Kensington. He characterized Dutrow, the operator at Silver Springa, as "incompetent, wild and reckless." Ha teatimony indicated that Dutrow, instead of copying train orders, tried to keep them in his head, while Dutrow himself testified that he believed, from his examination for the position, that he was not capable, but was put on by Division Superintendent McCauley metwithstanding.

"How did you judge of Dutrow's incompetency," asked the ceroner.

"The manner of working is sumclent for another operator to tell."

Moore said that he gave the engineer a clear light because the block was clear, and Moore replied: "This young fellow-from Silver Springs," meaning Dutrow. Mr. Moore asid he was not positive that the block was clear, "I told the engineer that I could not trust that party ((referring to Operator. Dutrow). I told the engineer: You go down there more care fully,"

He said he could not tell whether the block was clear, but he had been glaeer: You go down there more carefully."

He said he could not tell whether the block was clear, but he had been told since by Feeny, the extra operator, that it was not. Feeny was ordered to the wreek, but stopped off at Silver Springs to help Dutrow take train ordera. "Feeny told me," said Moore, "that Dutrow was not even copying the train orders, and he stayed there to do that. More said he had previously heard criticism of Dutrow's work from Feeny and Steele, the man at Kensington. He said he got his idea of Dutrow'a incapacity from his actions generally, and that he had heard, but indirectly, that Dutrow had displayed a wrong signal.

Mr. Moore was asked if he had ever heard that Dutrow had displayed awrong signal. The witness replied that he had, but the information was only from indirect sources.

There certainly is no lack of free discussion and criticism in the newspapers of the day on parties, politics and persons, and the man who enters the political area must take that life as he does his wife, "for better, for worse, for richer, for poorer, in sickness and in health, so long as they both do live."

It would be a good idea to get a bill through congress compelling public mon, to write down for future generations all the amusing incidents, letter, etc., that form part of their careers. Some of these, no doubt, would last longer than their public acts and what a world of entertainment would be contained therein!

Upon entering public life a man would better examine himself and see if he has these qualitations (we will take ability for granted); A cain and pattent disposition, a sense of the homorous and the tact to follow $t. Paul's injunction of being "all things to all men."

These qualities are good for any position in life, but almost indispensable for the wear and teas of an official career.

tt will Be A Good Thing, Push It Along.

Covington business men are about to take action in regard to an annoying business proposition with which that city has been confronted ever since the Southern railroad running out of Cincinnati was put in operation, previous to which time Covington controlled nearly the entire retail trade of Boone county that was not supplied by her local merchants. Immediately upon the coming of the Southern railroad, the Covington business men of all classes saw the greater part of their Boone county trade deflected—to Cincinnati by that great artery of travel, which makes it much more convenient for a large per cent of Boone county trade deflected—to Cincinnati by that great artery of travel, which makes it much more convenient for a large per cent of Boone county beople to reach Cincinnati than it is for them to go to Covington, and to this good day Covington, and to this good day Covington, and to this good day Covington has not been able to overcome the trouble and restore to her business men the Boone county trade that naturally belongs to them and which would return were the facilities for reaching Covington equal to those for going to Cincinnati.

Covington can retrieve the Boone county trade only through the medium of an interurban read, and it is this the business men are urging built. When the electric road was built from Covington to Highland cemetery on the Lexington pike, Covington people believed it would be pushed on into the country as far as Erlanger or Florence at an early day. In that they-have been disappointed year after year, and at last the business men have united and will do all in their power to have that road extended as far as Erlanger or Florence, from which latter point it would command without opposition the travel from the Richwood, Beaver, Mudick, Big Bone, Union Relieview

The attorneys who were on hand to prosecute Hargis for the murder of Dr. Cox, in Jackson, Breathitt county, were so thoroughly satisfied that special Judge Carnes was not giving them a aspare deal, that they appealed to the court of appeals for a restraining order, their first step towards having him removed from the bench.

A STORY OF THE CONQUEST

than looking to God who giveth wisdom to all men for the ask-ing.

To larsel the case seemed so plain, I suppose, that it seemed positively silly to ask God about it. Like the little boy who prayed for the protection of God only at night, because during the day he could take care of himself, so the Israelites thought that in the present eltusion they needed naught but their own judgment in deciding their course of action.

And It was just when they felt the wisset and most able to take care of themselves that the enemy turned the trick upon them.

Life is full of mistakes and tragedies because everybody else and everything else is consulted rather than the source of all light and all wisdom. But how is God to be consulted about everything? By subordination of the personal inclination and this conscious recognition of a higher will and higher purpose than our own.

will and higher purpose than our own.

By diligent use of our Godglven powers, while at the same time there is an appreciation of the limitations of human wisdom and judgment.

By the exercise of patience. Take time to decide a point at issue. A misstep is taken hrough haste which prevents a clear reading of the sign-post at the intersection of the ways.

By the apirit of prayer pervading the life. Pray without ceasing is the Scriptural admonistion. How? Surely not saying on bended knee in the secret chamber and audible repetition of words and phrases. Surely not by your going about with closed eyes and mind absorbed in apiritual contemplations. Surely not by any outward closk of sanctimoniousness. No. What then? Prayer is communion with God. And that communion consists in the conscious and unconscious domination of God in water life. It marks the perpet sists in the conscious and un-conscious domination of God in the life. It marks the perpet-ual attitude of the soul, so, that whether immersed in business for the time being, or what not, God's spirit is operative in the life. This is prayer without ceasing. ceasing ******

THER STORY.

THERE seemed no way but for the Globonites to joint forces with the fedorated kinss in the proposed war upon Joshua and the armies of Israel. Never before had the entire country between Jordan and the great sea been so aroused as at the present time. Tidings of the coming, of the the state of Israel had reached the land while yet the Israelites were in the wilderness far to the south and west, but since the miraculous crossing of the Jordan and the destruction of Jericho and Al the vague fears which had filled the minds of the inhabitants bad taken definite form in the despreate resolve to unite and give battle to Israel.

That very day a deputation from the bolings of the Miratine.

That very day a deputation from the kings of the Hittites, the Amorites, the Canaanites, the Perizzites, the Canaanites, and others of the lesser tribes of the country urged them to make alliance in the common cause against Iran. It has plain, the messengers asid what these Hoberts.

to make alliance in the common cause against Israel.

"It is plain," the messengers said, "that these thebrews seek war. They arrogate unto themselves great importance, and have openly declared, contempt for our gods. They have destroyed Jericho and Al with the inhabitants thereof, and they would do so to us. And because of this, oh, men'of Gibeon, the kings of all the country to the north and south and slong the coast of the great sea are raising a great army to give battle to Israel, and have sent us-to urge that your against men in this war.

your dishing men join them in this war."

This speech of the messengers was received with evident favor by the chief men of Gibeon who had been called together in council, and they would at once have given assent to the plan, had not old Second-Thought, as he was called—because of his invariable habit of saylag: "Ono't be in haste! Think it over!"—counseled delay!

"We will be better able to give answer in, the unrained, after we have considered well the matter." he urged, and to this the rest had finely reductantly agreed, and later, when they had came together to talk the matter eyer, old Second-Thought said:

"We all know the mighty things which the people of Israel have done right before our cycs. Surely their God is a mighty God that he could make a pathway through the Jordan and lead his people of y shor light in our very midst. We have seeming into heaven, and we know that he strong rarnes of those cities could not stand before Joraus and his men to strong rarnes of those cities could not stand before Joraus and his men though the armost of the ailles should be victorious, our country would be victorious, our country in the victorious would be victorious. Joshua or to the princes with him to do.

As a result on the third day when these men returned they reported that the strangers had dealt with them deceitfully and had not come from a far country, but were really their neighbors living only a short distance from Gligal. And they were wroth with Joshua and the princes for making the league and were for going at once against the Gibeonites, for, said they: "There is rich spoil in their cities which should be ours." But Joshua and the princes because of their eath which had been given, would not permit them so to do, but made the Gibeonites servants, that they would work for them continually.

Makes Great Gains.

Makes Great Gains.

Cheering news comes to hand of the progress in Japan. Bishop. Harris, who has charge of the Amorican Methodist Missions in Korea and Japan, says that during the recent war the churches made great gains in membership, and that they are now unusually active in evangelistic efforts. As regards andlences, ministense of churches, baptisms, and the circulation of the Scriptures, things have not been so bright for a legitime; and the gospel is receiving a better hearing than at any period since its introduction a generation ago. Another very healthy feature of Japanese Christianity reported by the Record of Christian Work, is the steady progress towards independence of foreign side, in a short time it is hoped that the Japanese churches will be self-sustaining, and even become missionaries, sending out native teachers to China and Korea.

This plan at once met the approval of the color men of Gibeon, and the next morning when they had sent the messengers of the kings away they at once began preparations to carry out the plan.

And they went to Joshua unto the camp at Gligal. Their arrival created no little stir, and quickly Joshua and the strangers were admitted to their presence, and to the statement that they bad come from a far country, Joshua made answer:

"Our God has commanded us saylos that we should not make league with any of the inhabitants of the land. Peradventure ye dwell among us."

"Nay, but from a far country are thy servants come," they replied. Because of the name of him and all that he did to the Empt, and all that he did to the two kings of the Amorites that were beyond Jordan, to Sihon king of Bashan, which was at Ashtaroth. Wherefore our ciders and slif the inhabitant spake to us, saying: Take victuals, with you for the journey, and go to meet them, and say unto them: We are your servants. French President's "Double."

Franch President's "Double."

M. Fallieres was, until recently, beliered to be the only president of the French republic who had no double, but his counterpart has been found.
The man who most resembles him physically is a respectable merchant of the Rue Saint Honore, who plays his part with decorum and dignity. He wears exactly the same kind of bluebutterfly neektie with white dots as, the president, the same kind of hat and exactly so oddly cut a beard. And on his promenades he is always accompanied by a frend who could easlly be taken for the president's priyate secretary. Dignified and with measured steps, the envisible double walks through the Faubours SaintHonore and feels overloyed at being saiuted on all sides.

HEADS SHAPED TO ORDER.

derman Doctor Explains Causes of Various Formations.

At a recent convention of German tracturalists and doctors Dr. Walcher, for Stuttgart, in an instructive papers put forth a sensational theory to explain the formation of the shape of the head of Infants. He maintained that the head of a child could be molded artificially. He found by experience that when a medium-shaped head is placed in a soft cushion the child turns on its back, or rests on the back of its head, in order to free mouth, nose and face. In this manner the head rests smoothly, and a short head is developed. But if the medium-shaped head of a child is placed on a hard under-rest, like a hair mattress or rolled carpet, the child's head turns saide, as if cannot stand any more on its bead than, an egg, for the muscle of the back is weakened. Therefore, with continued resting on the side a long head is developed. To prove his assertions the local matter is months it is long skulled. If the child had been placed on its back, according to other experiences its head would have been short-shaped. Dr. Watcher did not deny that the shape of the head was inherited, but asserted that it could be greatly influenced by the way the child extent.

lime, is the trade I wish to teach him.

A father who merely feeds and clothes the children he has begotten so far fuifilis but a third of his task. To the race, he owes men; to society, men of social dispositions; and to the state, citizens. Every man who can pay this tripic debt and does not pay it, is guilty of a crime, and the more guilty, perhaps, when the debt is only half paid. He who cannof thill the dutles of a father has no right to become such.

The proper study for man is that of his relations. While he knows himself only through his physical being, he ought to study himself through his relations with things, and this is the occupation of his childhood; but when he begins to feel his moral nature, he ought to study himself through his relations with men, and this is the occupation of his entire life, beginning at the point we have now reached (adolescence).—From Jean Jacques Rousseau's "Emile."

American idealism.

Since my first arrival in America I have held that the real spirit is idealistic, and that the average individual American is controlled by idealistic impulses. Those who may contractive me can not have sounded the depths of the philosophy of Raiph Waldo Emerson, or studied, the life and read the speeches of Abraham Lincoln, and considered their far-resching effect on the American people. In Lincoln's great character nothing can be more striking than the way in which he combined reality and the lottlest ideal, with a thoroughly practical capacity to achieve that, ideal by practical methods. This faculty seemed to give him a far-slighted, almost superhuman vision, which enabled him to pierce the clouds obscuring the sight of the keenest statesmen and thinkers of his age—Baron Speck von Sternburg, in Forum.

The easiest way to dehorn cattle is to get a stick of caustic and rub the incipient horns when the calf is a few days old. This if properly applied will effectually stop the growth. If in spite of the first rubbing the young horn seems to make its appearance, rub thoroughly, very clese at its base, but be careful not to get the caustic on the flesh or skin of calves, as it is very corrosive. Do not apply too freely at first.

Faithfulness to a Promise—
There is no more striking illustration in the Bible, we think, of the faithful fulfillment of a pledge given than this incident of Joshua and the peopie of Gibeon. Here was a people doubly despised in the eyes of Gibeon. Here was a people doubly despised in the eyes of Joshua and the peopie of Israel, First, because they were a heathen expense, and the people of Israel, First, because they were a heathen expense, and the people with him heathen expense and the people with him heathen of the green of green of the green of green o

THE STORY.

FIERCELY the battle raged and gradually the army of Israel was driving the great hosts of the enemy backward. All day long the struggle had continued and now the sun was nearing the western horizon and two hours more would see it disappearing below the mountain's crest. Defegt now seemed certain to Adonizedec ting of Jerusalem and to the other four kings who had federated themselves with him in the assault upon the stronghold of Gibeon, and the only gleam of hope for their shattered armies as they gradually fell hack before the mea of Israel was that darkness would cree long be upon-them and they would then be able to except under its friendly cover. And what though the Gibeonitos had exapped them this time through the help of Israel, they would recoun their shattered armies and some day later same upon them unawares and punish them for the treaty of peace which they had made with Israel.

It had come almost as a complete surprise to find that the army of

It had oone almost as a complete surprise to find that the army of Israel had come up to the help of the people of Gibeon, and they had learned during the day while the battle was on that Joshua by forced ma..., during the darkness of the night before had hastened from Gligal to Gibeon and haddhis divisions drawn up in battle order when the great armics of the fluck tings had appeared. It is little wonder therefore that at the very beginning they should have been disk s kings had appeared. It is little doer therefore that at the very bening they should have been digrected, and before the day was forer it became evident that hus would win the victory, and, as have said, Adont-zadec and they kings with him, as they took acil together, watched the dealing sun, and thanked their gods is soon darkness would give them opportunity of making good their agong the strength of the soon of the soon

Iffted his eyes to the sun and meanured its distance from the horizon, he muttered:

"Darkness will be upon us hefore our victory is complete, and then our enemies will eacape us."

"Oh, God," he continued, after a pause, "didst not thou tell us that thou hadst delivered them into our hands, and that there should not a man of them stand before us? And here they are about to escape, for the night soon cometh." And almost a sob exaped from the great, strong man, as he litted his eyes to heaven. "

Were they to fall short of a complete victory? Had they not heen told to destroy utterly those who bid defiance to God and God's people, and were they now to be hindered by the shortness of the day?
"Yea, will they not say that it was their god, the sun god, which has helped them?" he cried. "Will they not claim that he has hastened his journey across the heavens so as to quickly bring the darkness to their rellet?"

But does not the sun move at the dictates of God's will? the thought if the thought is the sun which was the control of the sun move at the dictates of God's will? the thought if the thought is the sun which we have the sun god which has the su

With the expression of the thought came the inner peace and assurance that he could, and he would, and descending test the sun, which is the should.

"Slack not thy hands. "The Lord will be the complete victory over these thy enemies."

"But the night cometh." was shouted back. "And in the darkness we dare not flight, lest we smite friend for loe.

"Slack not day in the darkness we dare not flight, lest we smite friend for loe.

"But the night cometh." was shouted back. "And in the darkness we dare not flight, lest we smite friend for loe.

"Yea." but God will leggthen his day," Joshua shouted back. And then, lifting his hands toward the heavens, he cried: "Sin, stand thou still upon Gibeon; and thou, moon, in the valley of Ajloni"

That was all that was said. Joshua returned to his observation point and the soidlers who had heen about him turned and carried the news everywhere through the ranks of Israel that daylight would not fail them, for Joshua had commanded the sun to stand still. With new vigor and earnestness the yought. One hour—two hours went by, and still the hosts of the enemy stubbornly strove to hold Israel in check.

Hopefully at first did they turn their eyes towards the sun. Then as the moments grew into the first hour and then the second, and still the sun held its place in the heavens, 'they looked in anxiety and growing terror at the sight. A fact not generally known is that hundreds of concerns throughout the country which now are doing business through the regular trade channels are awaiting only a parcels post law to unloose literature, aiready prepared in many Instances, which would project them into the mail order field, and this does not take into account the hundreds and perhaps thousands of entirely new mail order concerns which inevitably would spring into existence under such friendly auspices.

The two Chleago Institutions retrieved to, aiready occupying immense buildings, found themselves cramped for room. One of them expended not less than $1,000,009, and probably more, for a new home. The other lately has secured a new location and also will expend at least $1,000,000 for an immense new building.

Anyone who will reflect even casually on the subject must become impressed that the influence of the mail order business is toward the centralization of wealth, and how enormous a part it is playing in this direction will be understood from a second glance at the figures which have been given above.

It is due to himself what the final outcome is to be if the mail order now and the great strides which have marked its progress during the last half decade.

It is useless to repeat the well worn argument of the mail order concerns that they are selling goods enough more cheaply than the merchants in the regular channels of trade to leave their customers more money than ever to devote to home enterprises and institutions. The fallacy of this statement has been proved over and over again by actual and minute comparisons of goods, as to their quality and prices. The refute it finally and indisputably by a simpler and more chapity and prices. "Our little girl, one year and a half old, was taken with eczema or that was what the doctor called it. We called in the family doctor, and he gave some tablets and said she would be all right in a few days. The eczema grew worse and we called in doctor No. 2. He said she was teething, as soon as the teeth were through she would be all right. But she still grew worse. Doctor No. 3 said it was eczema. By this time she was nothing but a yellow, greenish sore. Well, he said she could help her, so we let him try it about a week. One morning we discovered a little yellow pimple on one of she yellow. So we went to Oswego to doctor No. 4, and he said the eye sight was gone, but that he could help it. We thought we would try doctor No. 5. Well, that proved the same, only he charged $10 more than doctor No. 4. We were nearly discouraged. I saw one of the Cuttura advertisements in the paper and thought, we would try the Cuttura, and thought, we would try the Cuttura and stagnerate, so I went and purchased a set of Cuticura. Remedies, which cost me $1, and in three days our daughter, who had been sick about disappenared. Of course It could not restore the eyesight, but if we had used Cuttura in time I am confident that it would have saved the eye. The pentagamist's defense was that he had not married the women; they had married him. When they proposed he had not the courage to say no. Neither money nor love, he sald, had prompted his nuptials; he was the victim of the stronger wills of his successive spouses. Of the five wives three appeared as witnesses, hut did not prosecute, saying that their common husband was a toper of whom they were giad to get rid. He was acquitted—on what ground does not appear. As all the years in which the multiplex husband took wives were leap years except 1881, he which the multiplex husband took wives were leap years except 1881, he which the multiplex husband took wives were leap years except 1881, he which the multiplex husband took wives to explain to his fair suitors that he was engaged. The immense financial loss occasioned by the flood that is now receding; in the Ohio river will never be ascertained even approximately, while the inconvenience and downright suffering it has visited upon the towns along the river has not been equaled since the white man began to keep tab on that river. There was more water in the river in 1884 than at any time during the present of the property of the flood district now than there were twenty-three years ago, and it is safe to predict that the experience of the past ten days will not stop the encroaching upon the right of way nature granted the usually gentle stream. The poor people sustained their full share of the suffering.

Hon J. C. Byland, of Walton,

Hon, J. C. Byland, of Walton, will be a candidate to succeed himself as the county's representative in the next General Assembly, and the man who opposes him will discover before the campaign is many days old that he has shouldered a considerable undertaking. Like all other representatives Mr. Byland's every official act during the last session may not have been approved by everyone of his constituents, yet his record is of as high merit as any of his predecessors while on the election contests that were before the House at the last session it was such as to entitle him to an endorsement if he had nothing else on which to base a claim. He was on the side of a free ballot and a fair count, and favored unseating the Louisville representatives who held their offices by virtue of the most outrageous election frauds ever perpetrated upon a people. He did not allow party bias to blind him to the frauds that placed Louis-Hon. J. C. Byland, of Walton omces by writte of the most out-rageous election frauds ever per-petrated upon a people. He did not allow party bias to blind him to the frauds that placed Louis-ville Democrats in the General Assembly, a sense of justice and fairness that was—lamentably lacking on the part of the major-ity of the Democratic members. The above is said as due Mr. By-land, and comes at a time when there is no other candidate to elaim that he is prejudiced by an unvanished truth.

Congressman Richardson, has introduced a bill to appropriate $40,000 to build a postoffice; and Glasgow. That amount of money would erect quite a handsome monument to the memory of Mr. Richard's public services, which the people in his district but recently decided to dispense with.

Very often a new law to suppress some evil is suggested, but the fact is new laws are not needed so much as are officers who will enforce the oresent laws without fear or favob. There is not a crime in the calendar that can not be prosecuted and punished under some existing law. Too much legislation makes things worse.

Everyone understands that the play of Foraker in the Senato over the Brownsville negro troops discharge is one of politics and not for any personal regard he may have for the discharged desperadoes, or for any square deal or patriotic motives. Senator Foraker is still busy and aggressive when he wishes to turn a point for his own benefit.

ment of Representative and Senator.

Within the next few days the first shipment of horses by the Kentucky Breeding Bureau of the American Breeders' Protective Association will take place. This shipment is the beginning of an important epoch in the development of the horse interests of Kentucky. The Breeding Bureau was organized because the rein behind it believed that of recent years Kentucky has allowed her standards of horse excellence to deteriorate. For well nigh a century she has borne the Peputation of being the home of the horse in America. She has supplied the markets of the United States with thoroughbreds, with trotting horses, with carriage and general purpose horses. The excellence of the general run of her horse stock has been unequaled by the stock of any other State. And the sale of horses alone has each year amounted to hundreds of thousands of dollars in the revenue which it has brought to her.

DUE TO THOROUGHBRED BLOOD The primary excellence of the Kentucky horse was due to the very great infusion of thoroughbred blood throughout the State. Many the solutions of the country as to the value of thoroughbred blood. By the solution of thoroughbred blood throughout the State.

From the thoroughbred directly come both the American saddle horse and the standard bred horse or trotter. These are the only two distinctive American breeds of horses. Because of the fact that the thoroughbred was their original source, and believing that a fresh infusion of thoroughbred blood could not fail to be of fast benefit, the Kentucky Breeding Bureau purposes donating to the farmers and stockmen of Kentucky a number of bigh-class thoroughbred stallions.

The service of the horses will be given outright to the people, though the title will remain in the Breeding Bureau. They will be placed with competent men in those sections of the State which seem to them most and the people of which seem to desire them most. The Breeding Bureau hopes within the next three months to have stallions placed in various sections of the State. Sooner or later it hopes to ofler premiums at the county fairs of those sections for the best produce of these different stallions and thus not only to stimulate interest but arouse competition between the different owners.

Horsemen generally pronounce the work which has been put on foot as the most important work that has ever been undertaken for the betterment of the general breed of horses of Kentucky. It is particularly gratifying in that it is work that is purely gratuitous on the part of the Breeding Bureau, work for which the men who are doing it neither desire nor can receive any

The Beet-Sugar Industry.

The census of 1905 shows much Progress in the beet-sugar industry of the United States, showing 61 establishments, against four in 1880, says the Bailtimore Sun, At present $55,923,459 is invested in beet-sugar production, and the annual product is worth $24,393,794. Most of the increase of plant and product has taken place since 1990, when the output was worth but $7,323,857. Of the census year on 240,757 acres and costing $11,345,785, four-lifths were grown by contract by independent farmers. The sugar factories do not grow their supply of beets to any large extent. Granulated beet sugar was produced to the extent of 496,618,314 pounds, worth $23,993,373. Other products were raw sugar, 11,23,607 pounds; molasses, 9,609,642 gallons, and pulp, worth $202,070. The leading states in beet sugar are Colorado, Michigan and California, the first producing $7,198. See worth-of beet sugar, the second $3,378,004 worth and the third $4,415,772 worth. California and Colorado Irrigate the land used to produce beets. In Utah a system of pipelines connects slicing stations with the central factories. The beets from the neighboring country are received at these slicing stations, where the juice is extracted and treated with a composition of lime, after which it is forced through the pipes to the factories.

Hereditary Divorce.

Hereditary Divorce.

As a matter of fact, divorces run in families. The children of a divorced mother are the likeliest themselves to contract alliances which the law will have to sever. There have heen numerous instances of families of sisters or hrothers who have gone through the divorce courts in almost unbroken succession. This phenomenon sheds some light on the true causes of divorce and suggests that a very large proportion of the separations which the law countenances are due not to an initial "fatal mistake" mor to complete "incompatibility," nor even to the actual misdeeds of either party, but to mental and Temperamental peculilarities. Not the institution of marriage is at fault, say; Chicago Sun, not the mistaken union of antipathetic personalities, but the human nature of one party or the other to the compact. Divorces are prevalent in certain families. So are incorrigible levity, disagreeable dispositions, unwillingness to ablde the consequences of a deliberate act, a deficient philosophy.

Spice of Life in Maine Woods.

The southeast corner of the state of Maine is a haply remnant of the ancient wilderness. The railroads will carry you around it in a day, if you wish to go that way, making a big oval of 200 or 200 miles along the sea, and by the hanks of the Penobscot, the Mattawamkeag and the St. Croix. But if you wisely wish to cross the oval, writes Henry Van Dyke, in Scribners, you must ride, or go afoot, or take to your canoe; probably you will have to try all three methods of locomotion, for the country is a mixed quantity, it reminds me of what I once heard in Stockholm—that the Creator, when the making of the rest of the world was done, had a lot of fragments of land and water, forests and meadows, mountains and valleys, lakes and moors, left over; and those he threw toogther to make the southern part of Sweden. I like that kind of a promiscuous country. The spice of life grows there.

Though Elihu Root, secretary of state, is a great lawyer and a successful diplomat, the verbiage of the diplomatic papers that bears his name is not his. As a lawyer of large practice he acquired the habit of directness and incisiveness, which is ill suited to the ways and customs of diplomacy. Realizing this fully, it was not long after Mr. Root assumed the duties of secretary of state that he discovered that the safest course for him to pursue would be to have one of his assistants clothe in the formal and stitled language of diplomacy every communication of importance he had to make to a foreign power. Accordingly he has Assistant Secretary Adee who has been longer in the state department than any other high official there, compose these communications.

Holland Bay, via London, Jan. 16.—
The city of Kingston, with 55,000 inhabitnats and thousands of tourists, was practically destroyed by a terrific earthquake. Estimates of the dead run as high as 1,000, a majority of whom are negroes.
Ten minutes after the first shock, which occured at 3:30 octock, flames burst out in the ruins and raged for three hours before any efforts were made to check them. They are now under control; but burning fittelly at

The people, terror-stricken, have fied to the low-lying hills at the rear of the city and are camping there, practically without food or shelter.

The government is using every effort to provide food for the homeless, but with little success so far because, of the terrific loss in the husiness section of Kingston.

Another problem which is causing much anxiety is the earing for several hundred injured, owing to the scarcity of doctors and the inadequacy of the supply of medicinal material.

Military Hospital Burned.

Among the distressing features of the entire disasier was the burning of military hospital, in which it is said 40 soldiers were hurned to death before any effort could be made to rescue them.

Many of the government buildings were destroyed, including the residence of the governor.

Several persons were shot by the troops that were called in to restore order after the first panie.

The day was one of the most beautiful of the winter in Kingston. The sun shone brilliantly and the treets were crowsled with natives and with fourists from all parts of the United States and Europe, who sought the warm clime of the Caribbean. It had been unusually caim and there was absolutely no warning of the coming disaster. Suddenly, at about 3:30 o'clock, there was a tearing wrenching of the earth under the city, which swayed and pounded vigorously for over 40 seconds.

Instantly the frail wails of the buildings in all directions collapsed inward, burying hundreds in the debris- and rausing the wildest panic among those in the streets and the open places, especially in the native quarters.

A few moments later the second shock occurred, somewhat less violent than the first, and this added to the frenzy of the rabble.

A third shock followed closely, and according to some reports, a fourth and a fifth. No one is certain about this. By this time fames had broken out in six different sections of the town and commenced eating their way through the ruins.

Many Roasted Alive.

Many Prosons who were pinned ander the debris were unable to extricate themselves and were roasted alive before help could reach them. Their cries could be heard above the roar of the flames, but in many cases the fleeing populace paid no heed and left the unfortunates to perish.

On the main streets particularly there was the wildest pandemonium. The first shock tore loose the trolley and electric wires and they fell to, the ground in a largied mass. The power house, strange to say, was not wrecked by the first shock, and the wires in the streets carried instant death to every living thing touching them.

Horses attached to business vehicles became entangled in the mesh of live wires and a number were electrocuted. This added to the tumuit. Many of the poorer inhabitants watted long enough to gather together some of their morp them through the streets. They too became entangled in the electric wires and many were killed before the current could be turned off.

In the confusion of the first shocks the fire-lighting apparatus of Kingston was rendered practically useless, and for three hours atteatly useless, and of three hours atteatly useless, and of the enough to gather together was rendered practically useless, and for three hours atteatly useless, and of the enough to gather the artificial was a man cross himself and kneel in story and the man prayed the sightseers in food and clothing were licked up by the fame before my effort could be made to save them, and the Myrtle Bank horle, the minciple hostelry of the city, was destroyed. Another peril that presses is that of pestilence. Though it is winter, the weather is warm. The ruins have not been thoroughly cleared of the dead, and this necessary work is now hampered by the new fires.

The depth of the water in the Kingston harbor increased 70 feet as though the bottom had dropped out of the channel. Homeial reports from outlying distributions and the weeked homes and settlements have been totally destroyed. These places are Boston, Fruitsville and Coley, located but few miles apart and east of Kingston some 25 or 30 miles. For many miles from Kingston there are openings in the earth, ruined sugar and coffee plantations and the wrecked homes and warehouses of the planters. Other small slodated towns are believed to have shared the fate of Fruitsville.

SHAW'S SILLY WAIL

d Have All Nations Buy from Us, But Sell Us Nothing—Atti-tude Typical of the Standpatters.

Secretary Shaw has little more time to serve as accretary of the treasury law which to urge his peculiar and generally harmful ideas on those willing to listen to him. As soon as he retires to private life be will be as harmless as a sucking dove or a cooing pigeon. But while he is secretary of the treasury he is certain of an audience to some extent, so his utterances have to be noticed, and when likely to do harm, criticised. In a speech at the commercial congress at Kansas City he expressed his anxiety lest while we delay in getting access to expanding foreign markets our surplus of products will "set back upon us like a betated tide to-the inundation—and awamping of our prosperity which is now our bonas."

Dread of pienty and a reduction of trust high prices seems to weigh upon the heart of Shaw, for his only idea is oger rid of our products by exporting them. He cannot see that reduced prices will lead to greater home consumption. Shaw in his economic coglitations has no-place for imports, he wants the pauger of Europe to buy, but thinks it is impertinence for him to sell to us. But fortunately the Shaw school of economics is scorned by the world's traders, and reciprocity of trade is a necessity, except for such raw products as are needed, that are not natural products of the importing nation or that are not raised its sumicient quantity to supply the home necessities. Those necessities, like cotton, corn and wheat must be bought by the nation needing them, and protective tariffs play but little part in their general world distribution.

ASSET CURRENCY

Proposed Referm is in the interest of the Banks.

As long as the bankers cannot agree on currency reform how can they expect congress to pass a bill that will give general satisfaction? The fact is there is no need for more currency for the volume is constantly being in creased by the enlarged gold production and the organization of new national banks and there is now over 50 per cent. more money in circulation than there was ten years ago. All the proposals for currency reform are in the interest of the great banks, which are paying enormous dividends and if the frenzied financiers of Wall street had not tied up so many millions in stock jobbing there would be more than enough money for all legitimate business. The fact that for stock exchange purposes interest on money is bid up far beyond the maximum legal rate, indicates there is something rotten in the prevailing conditions in the financial center.

That our whole financial system is an anomaly and should be reformed financial reports, but the reformation when undertaken, must be in the interest of the public and not for the treasury or the great bankers a monopoly of the lincresse or reduction of the volume of currency at will. That is too great a power to be placed in the hands of any man or set of men and will not be tolerated by the business interests or the people. The chief cause of the lack of money in Wall street is speculation, and as long as our trusts and corporations are allowed to issue new stocks and bonds without proper supervision there will always be periodical semi-money panics.

The enormous commissions and profits on such new issues of stocks and bonds are a standing temptation for the frenzied financiers to undertake to float such issues and compet the withdrawal of vast sums from tegitimate business purposes. Every bank and trust company in New York is loaded up with loans on these undigested securities waiting for the public to buy them at the fictitious price set upon them. Many of these securities have but little real value and may never pay dividends, but money is loaned on them by the bankers in conjunction with other stocks of more real value. They are the wild-at currency of Wall street, and the proposition to allow the banks to issue asset currency if will street, and the proposition to allow the banks to lasue asset currency if for the purpose of digesting these indigestible securities which the financial stomach has so far refused, or taken as a necessity to prevent the Wall street patient from collapse.

The people generally have nothing

fine mandata has a necessity to prevent the Wall street patient from collapse.

The people generally have nothing to do with speculation in Wall street and are satisfied with the present volume of currency and its being legal tender for what they purchase or sell. Any proposed change in the system they regard with suspicion, the more so, as the predatory trust promoters and the frenzied financiers are the instigators of the proposed reform. The country is now on the top wave of high prices, which have advanced 55 per cent, in ten years, produced by currency inflation of 55 per cent, during the same period and the frenzied financiers are the publican policy of protection to the trusts. To inflate the currency further with unsecured bank notes would only add a further burden on the farmer, the wage earner and especially on those with small fixed incomes, on, any proposed reform in our currency agreem must therefore have the first requisite of safety to the people and this the asset currency proposed does not contain.

Whole Nation is Entitled to Relief from High Prices.

The representatives of the people in congress did not have the gall to increase their own salaries, although over 100 Republicans voted for it, but the solid Democratic vote defeated the raise. The whole question of government salaries should be taken up together, for the greatly increased cost of living demands that the army, the navy and the civil service employes should have a similar increase to match the increased cost of living, for they have no other source of income. With congressmen, however, it is a different matter, for they-have an average of six months each year to attend to private business as law-yers, or otherwise, and it would be unfair to them to increase their own salaries without at the same time raising those of other officials, who have no other means of increasing their salaries. The standapt congressmen who refuse to revise the tariff which has fostered the trusts and protected them in increasing the price of their products, are quite consistent in voting to raise their salaries 50 per cent, as the equivalent of the increased cost of living. But Democrata, and others who hope to see the tariff revised, would rather strike at the root of the evil and thus also relieve the taxpayers, who are suffering from the same high trust prices. In universal demand for increased salaries shows the weak spot in the stand-pat theory. The tariff protects the trusts in putting up prices, but makes the people pay the tax in increased cost of living, and we can't draw in the recover ment as the trusts do, or there yould be no one left to pay the taxes. Tariff reform would again adjust prices at the expense of the trust and there would then be no need of increased one of the pay the taxes. Tariff reform would again adjust prices at the expense of the trusts and there would then be no need of increased one of the pay the taxes.

Entire Leyburn Farm Purchased By John Spian For Maddens.

Lexington, Ky.—The biggest deal in trotters made here since William Russell Allen bought the pick of Woodburn Sell Allen bought the pick of Woodburn farm years ago was closed by John Spian, acting for Edward and Joseph Madden, sons of J. E. Madden, of Hamburg Piace, he buying of P. P. Parish, Midway, Ky., the latter's entire Leyburn stud, embracing 11 royal bred trotting mares and filles. The price paid is private, but the amount involved in the transfer reaches far into the thousands. Parish only solid out because he had decided to quit the trotting horse business, and he would at that part with his stock only by selling the mares in a bunch so as to keep them together. Edward and Joseph Madden have now in charge the trotting department at Hamburg Piace, owning the Futurity winner Silko, the champion saddle borse Chance and Silko's three-year-old brother. The Leyburn family, which the mares and filles they bought-represent, is more fully represented in Europe than any other breed of trotters, William M. Helen Leyburn and Frince Leyburn being some of its représentatives abrood in securing these mares Edward and Joseph Madden, the youngest firm of trotting howe breeders in the world, have virtually a corner in the Leyburn trotting family in America.

Of such a record any institution might be proud; it is the best answer to the unenlightened whites in the south who still helieve that education "harms" the negro. ## SHIP SUBSIDY BILL

STATE AID FOR STEAMSHIP LINES

te as Much a Part of Commercial System as State Employment of Consuls to Promote Business.

Washington, Jan. 24.—The president Wednesdey sent a message to coagress calling attend in to the great desirability of enactment of legislation to help American shipping and American trade by encouraging the building and running of large and swift stamers to South America and the Orient. The urgent need of the country making an effort to do something like its share of its own carrying trade on the ocean has been called to his attention, the president says, in striking fashion by the experiences of Secretary Root on his recent South American tour.

ion by the experiences of Secretary Root on his recent South American tour.

State aid to steamship lines, the president says, is as much a part of the commercial system of today as state employment of consuls to promote business.

The president says that the proposed law which had been discussed in congress is in no sense experimental. It is based on the best and most successful precedents, as for instance on the recent Cunard contract with the British government.

The President discusses the bill now before the committee and says:

"It would be discreditable for us to surrender to our commercial rivals the great commerce of the Orlent, the great commerce we should have with South America and even our communication with Hawshand the Philipplines."

The text of the mensage is as follows:
"To the Senate and House of Representatives:
"I call your attention to the great decirability of enacting legislation to help American shipping and American trade by encouraging the building and furnishing of lines of large and swift steamers to South America and the Orlent.
"The urgent need of our country the state of the great of the reconstitution of the great of the great of the great of the great of the order."

trade by encouraging the bulling and furnishing of lines of large and swift ateamers to South America and the Orient.

"The urgent need of our country making an effort to do something like its share of its own carrying trade on the ocean has been called to our attention in striking fashion by the experiences of Secretary Root in his recent South American tour."

The president, therefore urges the passage of the ship subsidy hill.

the Message He Left.

New York, Jan. 24.—Within 15 minutes after he had registered at the Grand Union Hotel, Lathrop-Smith, a student in the law school at Columbia University, from Kansas City, committed suicide by shooting. He had not even taken off his overcost before he fired the shot which crashed through his bruin. No cause for the act can be learned. His fellow students are unsalted to the count for it, and a message, apparently written just before he fired the fatal shot was:

"Mother and all the loved once, goodby, Mother, good-by."

At Columbia it was said that Smith has been a student there for three years, and was greatly liked, and would have graduated this year.

Smith was a member of one of the most prominent families in Kansas City.

fastest thing on wheels, was totally destroyed on the Ormond-Daytona. It was the closing event of what up to that time had proved rather a sensationless meeting. The experience was such as few of the thousands of specias or who witnessed the same would care to he repeated. It was a happening which sent a thrill of horor running from one end of the course o the other. The wonder of it all is that Marriott was not instantly killed.

Marriott and the "Bug" had just started on what was his third, and what proved to be his last, attempt to lower his one-mile record. He had gone three miles down he beach from the starting point in order to get a good start. As he came acros the mark was not instantly with the was going like a vertable whirly wind. To all appearances he was going well and fast enough to get within the record.

The front of the hood was seen to rise up slightly, and as the frail oratt took a slight bump-the torpedo-shaped car jumped bigh in the air, the hood opened up like the mouth of an alligator. Hardly a second was the car in the air, and yet it jumped along fo. 20 yards. That was long enough for the wind to take and blow the craft sideways, making it ummanageshle. When she struck the ground the carrofied over several times and then broke apart, the boller going into the water for some hundred feet, the engine going linand and the whels phrioning Marrottt to the ground.

Mr. Beimont won the latest round. He built a spite fence right across from Mr. Page's best-beloved window seat, and those who have followed the Beimont fortunes in the struggle claim easy honors for the capitalist.

Mr. Page drew first blood, and it was perhaps a sunking blow which marked the battle's inception, when he wrote some pleess for the mage zines which were not bighly flattering to Perry Beimont nor bils brother, O. H. P.

Mr. Beimont read the magazine articles. He also heard of the anecdote in which Mr. Page played the lead. A few days later the real estate transfer noted that the triangular trapt of ground had passed into the possession of P. Beimont.

When next Mr. Page sought recuperation from literary toil his joyons landscape had degenerated into a barnyard symphony. Mr. Belmont's laborers had erected a high and unsightly wire fence and another force started in on a rock wall, which sets Mr. Page's property into a settlement by itself and with the view terminating at the lot line.

AN INDICATION OF GENERAL PROSPERITY.

AN INDICATION OF GENERAL PROSPERITY.

Bacretary Shaw has succeeded in securing the rectum to the treasury of 800 $1,000 bills. The place of these in, the circulation has been taken, in large part, by new teg-dollar bills. The reason is that appeals have been coming to the treasury constituantly to send out more tens, because there was a tremendous demand for them.

This demand is simply a sign of the great prosperity of the country, seconding to financial men. Several years ago there was a constant cry for one and towoldiar bills. That cry has passed and people are walling for tens.

The supposition is that in these fat financial days the multitudes are looking upon the tendollar note as lightly as they looked upon a note of one-fifth or one-tent its value in the days when banks were breaking and people were asking the way to the souphouse. There is probably no Joke about the statement that the demand for bills of a high donomination means that prosperity is abroad. When wages are low and when people are spending little or nothing for luxuries they may went ten-dollar bills, but they don't get them.

The requests for "tennets" worried the treasury department for a long while. Under the law it couldn't put these bills out except in exchange for money didn't come in as rapidly as it should; so it was that an attempt was made to get-some notes of large domonination from the financial ceiters and to put the "sawbucks" out in their place. There isn't much use-for $1,000 bills in the paths of general circuitation, and it was considered better to get them do and let the tens out. In this way the secretary managed to put $0,000 ten-dollar bills in the outer practicality at one shipment.

FARMERS AND WAGE EARNERS NOT GETTING THEIR SHARE.

Figures Show That Protected Trus and Corporations have Forced Prices for Cost of Living Far Above Increased Wages Paid

We are all impressed with the prosperity that the great business interests of the country are enjeying, but somehow many of us feel that we are not getting our share. There is no disputing the prosperity of the few, but there is still stronger evidence that many farmers and wage carners are not getting just what should be coming to them. The price of farm preducts, with the exception of wheat, bas increased, wages of workingmen have advanced, and yet he greatly increased outgo. The "figures" of Dun and Bradstreet show that the price of all commodities has risen on an average over 50 per cent, since 1886, but the statistics of the average wages paid indicate an

No wonder there is unrest and that all who carn salaries and wages are demanding more pay, but as the cost of living is advancing at the rate of living is advancing at the rate of living is advancing at the rate of living that wages and salaries will never catch up with the cost of living. As a political proposition the votess must remember that in 1595 and for three years previous the Democratic tariff rates were quite high, averaging $3.68 per cent, ad valorem, whereas under the present law the rates exceed 59 per cent, or over 20 per cent, higher. That emorpous increase fostered the formation of trusts and combines, which very naturally, finding the prices in the prices in the prices in the prices in the salary of the prices in the price in the prices in the price in the prices in the price in the product in a price in the product in a price in the price in the price in the product in a price in the price in the product in a price in the price in the product in a price in the price in the product in a price in the price in the product in a price in the price in the price in the product in a price in the price in the product in a price in the price in the product in a price in the product in a price in the price in

TAINTED MONEY.

Why does President Roosevelt, it spite of the advice of many of his friends, persist in making Mr. Cortel you secretary of the treasury? He is still chaliman of the Republican national committee and it is not long ago be was collecting vast sums of money from the Wall street bankers and from the life insurance companies controlled by the same interest. It has been shown that the money received from the life insurance commanders, and although public opinion universally holds that the money was tainted and that restitution should be made, Mr. Cortelyon, who carried the harge balance—sald-to be $400,000—in. the hands of the committee, has refused to make restitution. In this the needed to make restitution. In this the president appears to uphold him by lace in his cabinet. The trusts are still protected by the railf and are advancing prices, in tend of reducing them, and indeed in the party is try and, proceed. Why, bless your dear old laitocratic sout, the corporations are cilli, in clover, but if they are wide waske to the signs of the times they ull-set their houses in order, for unless there is a more equal distribution for profits there will be a cyclone ere 'mg that will certainly upset a good any people that now feel quite secure on their prosperity perch. The rouble is the "financial interests" was overplayed their hands and fear hat the public will "call" them.

For the past ten years the trust and corporations have had it all their was way, with the Republican party rotecting them and in return being corruption and graft. United States Senator Bailey.

United States Senator Bailey, of Texas, was reelected without trouble. His election was an effort at vindication before an investigation of the charges of being too intimate with the Standard Oil Trust, could be made. If the Senator is as innocent of any wrongful dealings with that trust as he claims, he could have well afforded to wait the result of the investigation.

The meeting of the Coyington business men and the city council, which was to be held, last Friday night for the consideration of the extension of an electric road into Boone county, was called off, owing to a press of other business the council had on hand. The business men of the city are taking great interest in the move and if it is not pushed to a satisfactory conclusion it will not be their fault. The people of this county will welcome the coming of the road, and will prove loyal patrons of those merchants and other business men in Covington, who may be instrumental in having an electric road enter their territory. enter their territory.

Those who ought to know say the tobacco pool has won its victory, and the 1906 crop will surely be handled by it, although the arrangements owing to the short time in which there is to perfect them, will not be as complete and perfect as they will be for handling the 1907 crop. The financing, it appears, will be done largely by the county banks in the burley district, they being secured in a manner that will make them perfectly safe in advancing the money necessary on the crops of persons who have to have money on their tobacco. The tobacco men are a great deal nearer to the goal for which they have been striving for several years than they have ever been.

W. F. Schuerman, who was the Republican candidate for Congress in this district, last fall, has developed into a disturbing element in his party, and is charged with secretly calling a meeting of leading Republicans for the purpose of organizing to defeat the party machine in the next State convention. He believes, it is said, that had the machine been loyal to him last fall he would have defeated Hon. Joseph L. Rhinock for Congress, and for that reason he wants to put the machine out of business. Mr. Schuerman is young in politics and the wonderful race he ran last fall would appeal to one with more experience as a victory, although he was not elected. It was not Mr. Schuerman, single handed and alone, who came within 365 votes of wiping out a uormal democratic majority in the district of at least 4,000 votes. He had assistance and that from parties decidedly more skilled in politics than he is, but then if he wants to make war on the Re-

The gray stone walls of the old French convent were anstere and for hicking, but behind the fron gates a class and delicious garden dreamed in the mellow, October sunshine. Up and down the gleeming paths of white marble paced Sister Victorine and "Angel" Smith, of Miwaukee.

A pace or two behind them walked Sister Victorine's familiar, the convent cat—the pampered, the quillant, the convent cat—the pampered, the quillant was not convent or the distribution of the convent cat—the pampered of the quillant was not one of the lawless, intriguing breed of cats of Paris, and her eyes still retained the expression of the boulevardier.

This was Angel's second year of urwilling exilia of the intrillants realization of encompassing walls whose open sessme she was not to know. To be thrust into a convent for falling in love a few years in advance of the late decided upon by—parents and surrelians, is a very passes situation in fiction; but when such a thing occurs in real life, it is so roccos as to be extremely ridiculous. This "Angel" fett keenly.

She would have regarded her lot as unrelieved tragedy were it not that "Ralp's" twenty-first birthday ocourred at the beginning of her second year of seclusion, and her had promised that on the day following the attainment of his majority he would set sail for France and rescue his captive princess. But Angel's monotonous existence was not destined to be of long duration. One evening, as the girls sail in the long, paper efectory eating there was a sound without as of the running of many feet, and Sister Victorine breast into the long, paper perfectory eating there will be the product of All Angels—a man. "The good Rossine, our maid, glanced from the window of the buttery and saw, walking up and down the estreet of All Angels—a man. He meditated eril, for he scanned the convent closely. Then Rosine hastened to inform the mother superior who ordered the gates locked at none. Butter, and the superior who may be supported the sates locked at Lulu might be without!"

While Slater Victorine spoke "Ansel" Smith's eyes had dilated curious ip. Her face was pale and on her lip lay a vivid smile.

The aext afternoon in the freedom of the garden "Angel" confided her hopes to her schoolmates.

The daughters of European nobility grew pale. They swayed as if in a strong gust of wind. Such daring sentiments! Such 'heart devastating comotions.

But the times were pregnant with events. Just as they reached the far end of the garden, in their walk, a stone wrapped in white paper whizzed over the Jvygrown wall and struck Luiu, the eat, so that the air resounded with he loud cries. Fortunately, hases falled to arouse Sister Victorine, who doxed peacefully becath a nearby pear tree. Then "Angel," surrounded by her breathless and excited companions, read the scrawl. It assured her of undying love and certain rescue, even if it were precessary to dynamite the convent. It begged that as the evening grow dusk, she climb the tree which kaned against the southwest wall and there he, mounted upon a ladder, would meet and assist berdown the other side. Her sistef was in the riliage, and would witness their marriage, and then they would fay to Paris to win the forgiveness of her mother.

"Angel" obeyed, and sent the white-wrapped stope fiying back over the wall. Having acted, she paused to think. "Now that I have said I would, how can I?" she asked, dejectedly. "You know that we are not allowed in the garden after dark." "Intiguie will be necessary," said the countess, firmly. "A moment! I have an inspiration!"
She rolled her eyes wildly and clutched her curiry black head. "Listen, then! We will keep Lulu among ma all afternoon. During study hours, I can slip away a moment. I will bear her to a tree by the southwest wall and the first there by a cord fast tende to ber colfar. Just at the close of supper we will tell Victorine that she has escaped. Victorine will express distress, consternation; and you must demand the privilege of searching for her. Once without, rush straight for the tree, cut Lulu's cord, and over the wall. Fate herself seemed to aid that laughter of a quick-witted race. Lud's cord was sufficiently long to perait her to spend several happy hours is as exotting chans after some scolding and world of the poper moment she was discovered missister.

Victorine's agitation was as greats, had ever been hoped, and "Angel" mith's offer of service was gladly accepted. Mud Houses Built By Wasps.

A naturalist has thus described the habits of a species of wasp that makes it's nest of mud, says the Dundee Advertiser. The mud of which their nests are composed, he said, is often carried for some distance, and it is essential for them to use good, stiff clay. At the edge of some pond or stream yos may see these insects roll sticky little balls out of the stiff mud with their strong law. With this heavy load of mud they rise slowly, and, having gaiped some height, they get their bearings and fly in a straight line to their nest. In this they resemble the hees; indeed, all the wasps and bees seem to have a wonderful factulty for flying directly home from any point. When the wasp has gained the place selected for a building stie she puts the tiny ball of mud against the wall of the building and ribs it tight by moving her bead from side to side very rapidly. The outer surface of the nest shows a series of rings, with sharply defined lines between of the nest above a series of rings, with sharply defined lines between of the nest above a series of rings, with sharply defined lines between the time of the most a perfect cylinder. While building her most of the nest continually runs in and out of the tiny cylinder, examining it minutely with her "feelers." If a rough place is felt on the liner surface she carefully sets to work and rubs it smooth. When the cylinder is finished the wasp soes hunting for spiders.

That Russian in a Pennsylvania town who killed his wife, and just'ised it in this sentence, "I have aeright to kill my wife: it's nobody's business but my own," carried to an extreme should be a still surviving and by no means uncommon theory of the marriage relation. The Ten Commandments place in the same category "thy neighbor's wife." and "his or," "his ass," "anything that is thy neighbor's. "A good many well-meaning people look upon their own wife as in the same category with their domestic animals in the respect that she, too, is their personal property. It was an awkward dilemma in which a minister found himself a day by so ago. Dinner was announced in due time and was heartily enjoyed by the minister, who, after a couple of hours spent in conversation, departed for bis home, chuckling over his success in so hapily solving the dinner problem. The next afternoon the minister chanced to meet Mrs. A— and Mrs. B—, an other of his parishioners, while taking a strell.

The Siesping Baby "Smile."

"It is interesting to see how old is the maternal delusion about the smiling of bables in their siesp. All shilders, asleep, are taken with a calching of the corners of the, mouth, which is as unlike as possible to the real smile—the humorous and delightful little silent sketch-of-a-laugh, appearing first at any age between a fortnight and a month. Yet human sentimentality has insisted on calling the sleeping grimace (due to flatulence) a smile, and even a smile caused by dreams of angels. And Saint Monica must have been as unlatelligible on this point as any other matron, for Saint Asiguatic, reviewing in his "Confessions" the growth of his own mind, mentions that he had been told of the counting of infantine smiles, "baving appeared previously to sleep." Thackeray echoes St. Moinica, for he shows us Amelia sitting by her child, "who was smiling in his sleep," No baby ever likely to do so.

SERMODETTE.

This stelly of Othniel and Achsah is one of the many beautiful romanes found in God's Word. True marriages, it has been said, are made inheaven, and certainy the Biblegives evidence in its record in the human race of God's interest and share-in the closest its which can draw two hearts and ilves together—that of mar-risge.

It is evident from God's spoken word when he created man and women he gave them to each other that he intended them to be one in thought and purpose and alm, that to so bear life's burdens together, and most and best of all, establish the home and raise a family about them.

But too many men and women of to-day have drifted far from the Divine thought and plan for the wedded life. The unhappy homes and the records of divorce courts heat their ad witness to the havoc which selfahness and sin he wrought. No longer does there prevail the same affordness to the marriage vow. Engagements are a thoughtiese divarsion, a momentary fancy to be entered into lightly and to be cast aside, and broken ruthlessly if whim or caprice so prompt Marriages are hastily contracted, or with that shallownass of purpose which never so much as entertains the faintest intention of home making and the rearing of a family.

And when the very thought and purpose of God is thus ruthlessly and sinfully cast saide, and man and women enter interelations which are not sanctified with holy purposes and desires what can be expected of the ultimate outcome?

It has been said, and well said, that the greatest danger which this country faces to-day is the destruction of the home life of the nation. What can be the stamina of the coming generation of men and women, if they are not to have the nurture and training of the purpose of the divorce courts. But it is not so where God has a share in the romance and joins two

THE STORY.

THE first one to greet Caleb as he returned with his men victorious from the assault upon Hebron was his young and beautifut daughter Achash: She had been the last one to bid him God-speed as he had departed on the expodition against the strong-walled city of the spas of Anak, and her words of fatth and assurance that God would give him the victory had cheered and attengthened him in all the flerce conflict of the days that had followed, and while he had been warring on the city. Achash had kept watch for his return, and that morning had gone out slong the pathway which led from her home to the high knoil which looked out over the valley through which her fatherwould pass, It had been five days now since his departure, and she felt he must return that day, for he had said as he waved her a last good-by that he would be back surely in four days, and here the fifth day was nearly half gone.

"Can it be that disaster has come to him?" she asked hereal, as the

that he would be back aurely in four days, and here the fifth day was nearly half gone.

"Can it be that disaster has come to him?" she asked herself, as she looked out across the valley and sought to penetrate the rusged pathway that led up into the rocky heights where Hebron was situated. "No," she excisimed, half guiltily, because of the doubt that had crept into her heart, "No, that cusnot be, for did not God promise him this city as an inheritance? He tarries that he may win a yet greater victory. But he will surely come to-day," she added, as she settled herself at the foot of a rock comfortably and gave herself up to fogous anticipation.

When the division of the land had been made under the direction of Jonhus, she had felt soemwhat rebellious that such difficult portion should be given to her father. "Why," she had seked, petilantly, "did they not sive you inheritance in the fruitful valley of the Jorden? You have fought hard and served long in behalf of strace, is it not time that an easy portion were given you?" And her fether had drawn her close to his side and had retold to her all the thrilling early history of largel. How as one of the spies he had declared that they were able to overcome the strong, city, or Anaxim, and that God, had promised that city and the country round as he inheritance. "And

and he had stratehed himself to his full height and hid drawn her up in his powerful arms, and beld her laughingly before him while he demanded anaway.

And she had booked into his eyes and that caught the split of his courage and fatth. From that moment

"I am giad Othniel went with him."

after a faw moment's pause, "had it not been for his enthusiasm and help, father would not have had enough men to carry out the expedition. Oh, he is so strong, and noble, and brave," and she gave herself up to happy reverie from which she was suddenly aroused by the note of a horn, and looking up quickly she saw coming across the valley-below her father and his warrlors.

Springing to her feet, she sped down the pathway and vas soon clasped in his arms, who hastened forward to meet her, while his men atood watching the happy reunion.

"And you took the city, father?"
Achash asked, eagerly.

"Yes, daughter, and I would have gone against Kirjath-sepher, also, had I not known bett you would be anxious about my retu..."

And Caleb went on to tell her of this second stronghold of the enemy, and how its capture was necessary before they could enjoy the fruits of their glotory over Hebron.

Achash pursed up her pretty lips, and a frown settled upon her brow.

During the days which followed Achsah's heart was torn by its conflict of hopes and fears. What if Othniel did not take the city, and the pledge of her father should give her to another? Oh, it could not be, for there was no more daring, and brave a fighter than he. And she prayed that fortune might favor his efforts.

And in the meantime, Othniel, nerved by the memory of that shy, heautiful face, pushed forward, resting neither day nor night as he worked out his bold plot for the gaining of the linner walls of the city. This he succeeded in doing, and when he had thrown open the gates of the city, he found his brether ready to ald him in the conquest of the eity. And so it was that while Achsah epither vigil again at the lookout post, Othaiel overthrew the city and turned his face homeward.

Achsah saw him coming at the head of his men and, after the first swift glance of joy, she field in maid-enly modesty towards home, but not before Othniel's quick eye had caught the futter of her robe in the pright sunlight, and, running swiftly by a short cut, he reached a point in her pathway before her.

"All love, you cannot escape me!" he exclaimed, as he sprang from his arms.

LAW AT ANY HOUR.

The hotela and their patrpns are largely responsible for this continuous feature in business lines. At the large hotels business men meet after the conventional hours to discuss business men meet after the conventional hours to discuss business enterprises. They find themselves frequently in need of the sewices of a lawyer or air expert accountant, and to meet this demand the new company was recently organized.

A man who got married under romantic circumstances a few weeks ago found the services of the company valuable in earrying out his plans.

His arrangements required the leasting of a steam yacht, and he sought in vain for a lawyer qualified to draw up such a tease until at 11.30 p. m. he heard of the existence of the company. By 11.45 one of the company's law-yers, accompanied by a stenographer, was in his room and the necessary document was being dictated.

The completed papers, ready for the signatures of the itsessor and lessee, were in his hands the following morning at six o'clock. At seven the signatures of all partles had been obtained, and at eight the bridegroom, accompanied by his bride and her friend-were steaming up'the Hudson river to the place where they were married at noon.

The establishment of the 24-hour service is the result of a conversation the president of the company had with the manager of one of the greatest hetels.

"We have had a number of the great the place of our guests, but of late we have had a number of calls for lawyers to draw up contracts or to give advice about matters requiring urgent attention." "If it were not for the expense I would have my own hotel attorney quartered right-here in the house."
The suggestion of the hotel man was followed in less than a week by the establishment of the company, and uptown and downtown offices were opened for the transaction of business at all hours of the day and night except Sundays. All the principal hotels in New York are in touch with the company.

"I must give much praise to all the Cuticura Kemedies. I used but one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Continent, as that was all that was required to cure my disease. I was very much troubled with eczema of the head, and a friend of mine told me to use the Cuticura Remedies, which I did, and am glad to say that they cused my cezema entirely. Since then we have always kept the soap on hand at all times. My sister was also cured of eczema of the head by using the Cuticura Remedies. Another sister has used Cuticura Resolvent and Pills and thinks they are a splendid tonic. I cannot say exactly how long I suffered, but I think about six months. Miss Edith Hammer, R. F. D. Changes in Dismal Swamp.

Investigations of the scientists at Washington have recently developed the fact that at present the area of the Dismal swamp is slowly sinking, and Lake Drummond, in its center, is growing larger. Similar changes have occurred in the past, periods of elevation and subsidence gradually succeeding one another. The average elevation above sea level is so slight that natural drainage is insufficient.

A Story of the Conquest of Cansan' by the Hebrew People.

which Christ performs for the sainner.

The cities of refuge gave shelter to the fugitive from the avenger of blood. Christ gives shelter to the sinner whose adcersary the Devil pursues him to the very threshold of the Divine refuge.

The one fleeing to the city of refuge was safe until his case could be declared and he proven his right to abide there, for if his hands were stained with the willful blood of another he was delivered into the hands of the avenger of blood and his life taken.

The one fleeing to Christ is safe until his case is declared. What right has he there? fornone who come to that eternal city of refuge opened by God for all the world is without ain. The adversary, the Devil, comes up to the very door and makes his accusations. And what his accusations. And what his accusations. And what chail of mar's life and paint it in the blackest colors. How he can recall the smallest detail of mar's life and paint it in the blackest colors. How he can uncover the hidden ains and show one pelpleas and undone in the presence of the high priest of the place, Christ desur, the anointed One of God. But shall the unfalling justice of God cast the sinner forth and commit him to his just deserts? Shall sin claim her own and cast down to hell?

Thank God, No! For herein is the city of refuge or the firstellies I've accessed in grace and mercy by the city of refuge which God hath appointed. No sout that seeks refuge therein is over forced to leave, for the Christ within has but to show the nalled hands and the spear wound in his eide as token of his offering for sin, and Stan, the great avenger, is forced to feet.

The cities of refuge were equidistant and easy of access from all parts of the land. So is Christ. He is nigh everyone of a contribe heart. His "come" is always sounding forth, and his invitation is reenforced by the comforting assurance that "the that cometh unto Me I will in no wise east-out."

The gates of the cities of refuge were always open and the

The gates of the citles of ref-uge, were always open and the priests in the watsh towers ready to reach forth and help the weary and exhausted run-ner. And how infinitely more true this is of the Christ. His arms are always outstretched to save. The faintest cry from the lips of the sinner reaches, his der and instantly sommands his help.

The day before several planks had been lookened in the walls of the stable, through which Gershuni, having emerged from the barrel, was enabled to make his scape with the aid of a convict who accompanied him. Orleans Water Frent.

New Orleans, Jan. 30.—At two low points along the business water front of New Orleans, Canal street and Jackson avenue, respectively, the river rose to the top of the levee. Skrength of Japanese Wins.

There is no liquor in the world upon which a man becomes so quickly intoxicated as Japanese sake (rice wire), and yet none of which the effects last so short a time. The intoxication is pleasant as the effect of oppin or hasheesh. It is soft, pleasant, luminous exhibration, cerything becoming brighter, happier, lighter; then you ket very sleepy.

At Japanese dinners it is the rule to become slightly exhibrated, but not to drink croosed. The ability to drink at background. The Higher Obligations.
Recent events have made impedive some consideration of the other of siving testimony. Every one call such a person a "tattetate," at lastifiably look down upon him. The informer is a spy, a breaker of go faith, a violator of the sacred laws heresteath. Th ratth, a violator of the sacred laws o hospitality. Loyalty to family and to friends is the cement which holds so clety together. Trouble comes when men act upon a mistaken view of what clety together. Trouble comes when men act upon a mistaken view of wast constitutes loyalty to society at largathat society which is but an aggregation of families and friends. The extistence of orderly government depends on the observance of certain laws, unpunished disobadience to which produces anarchy. When crime is committed, every person with knowledge of it is under moral obligation, when sixed, to tell what he knows. In some cases the obligation extends so far as to require him to evolutioner information against his friends. The maintenance of order and safe governmenties of so much greater importance than the protection of law-breaking friends that the state justly conceals the orime or who assists the guilty to excape. This rule is the result of long experience, and its justice is nowhere disputed. Vet, in practice, it is difficult to enforce it, says Youth's Companion, because of the prevalence of false standards growing out of abhorence of the informer. There is no high school principal or college president who has not come in contact with these false standards in his attempt to maintain discipline. The slowness of this same public in lashing other kinds of transgression betrays, not sycophancy or unthinking admiration of success, but perplecity, says E. A. Ross in Atlantic. The prosperous evilidoers that bask undisturbed in popular favor have been careful to shun—or seem to shun—the famillar types of wickedness. Overlooked in Bible and prayerbook, their obliquities lack the brimstone smell. Surpass as their misdeeds may in meanness and cruelty, there has not yet been time fenough to store up strong emotion about them, and so the sight of them does not loose the flood of wrath and abhorrence that rushes down upon the ling-attained sins.

States Now On Foot.

Washington, Jan. 31.—Despite the most vigilant precastions of the president and his advisers in keeping the information to themselves, the fact has leaked out that the relations between the United States and Japan have reached a most critical stage. According to one of the president's advisers, the two countries seem to be drifting rapidly toward war, and, deft and vigorous diplomacy must be serviced if certain new developments are to be disposed of without explosion. A conference was held at the white house between the president and the California delegation, looking toward a solution of one phase of the difficulty.

and the solution of one difficulty.

Bluntly stated, the administration is that the Japanes difficulty.

Bluntly stated, the adminatration is in possession of information which forces it to assume that the Japanesa government is attempting to withstand tremendous pressure tending toward a rupture of friendly relations with the United States. This ominous sixuation in Japan is made deably critical by the attitude of the Pacific coast, which refuses to budge an inch in its position of hostility toward the Japanese. The San Francisco school authorities have not only prepared to make a fight against the federal government in the courts, birt the California senate on Tuesday adopted a resolution strenuously protesting against the "unwarranted interference" by government with the "constitutional rights of a sovereign state," and requesting the governor and attorney general to take all steps necessary to protect the state and save its rights.

In the face of this simblorn attitude of the people of Japan and those of California comes the usly rumor from Hawall that thousands of Japanese veterans of the Russo-Japanese war are fomenting a movement in secret to organize military companies on American soil. This information is said to have reached the war department from authentic sources. An investigation is now reported to be on foot, which, if it should verify the current report, would accessarily precipitate a crisis which might otherwise be avoided.

It is now understood that the Japanese government has instructed Viscount Aoki to Insist upon certain stipulations as a preliminary to the making of a new treaty. The most important of these is that the treaty shall expressly grant Japanese in the United States all rights granted to citizens or subjects of the most favored nation, which includes, of course, the privilege of Japanese children to atend the public schools, a privilege that is enjoyed by the children of other nations. The administration is freatly embarrassed by this demand on the part of Japan, as it is not in a position to be certain that the school privilege can be granted by a treatly as against the oposition of a state. This question is pending in the courts, and until it is decided the scope of the governments authority is unknown. Moreover, the administration fears that if it should will its contention with California and should grant school privileges to Japanese, there would be such a disturbance on the Parlifa coasts as to bring about were Boubt as to What Nation and Age First Used Them.

Horseshoes were not known to the ancients, and there is much doubt as to what nation and age first used them. An authority on the subject says: "The first kind of shoe known was not a shoest all. It was a species of sock, often made with woven or plaited hemp. Cambel in ancient warfare were thus shod, and so were smiles and horses when their hoofs were burt. In that of heavy snow these socks were sinking up to their girold with such and the state of the stat

"French horseshoeologists think that the Celts were the first to use mailed on shees before the Christian era and that they popularized their use throughout Gaul, Germany and England. Many shoes have been found in graves, the favorite horses having been slain and buried with their masters in accordance with primitive beliefs as to the hereafter. Between the French towns of Langres and Dijon, near the spot where Caesar encamped his army at the siege of Alesia (B. C. 52), small fullered shoes have been found at adepth of two or three feet in the ground, Some have nails in the shape of a Roman T and are provided with climches. Others ascribed by geologists to the sixth century have been found in the Berneeg Jura. All these had six large, round nail holes, and opposite to each hole the border of the shoe is scalloped. Some shoes had heels and some had not. But the heels were hardly of any size and, moreover, lacked strength."—Chicago News.

Mares For Work Purposes.

We must depend on the farmer who will raise at least a few horses each year in connection with other lines of live stock production and grain growing for our supply of horses. The small farmer who does not have land enough to keep mares for breeding purposes exclusively should aim to use mares for work purposes and breed them. This will cause some inconvenience in getting the farm work done, but more healthy normal colts are produced in this way than when the the mares are allowed to run-idle. If the mares are worked they will not suffer from lack of exercise, and the feal is more apt to be grown properly the first summer.—Professor W. B. Richards in Farmer.

The Increased Cost of Living.

"Interviews with city housewives brought out the facts that nine tenths of them are struggling with the problem of how to make a tendollar weekly income cover at welvedollar weekly expense. The cost of food, fuel, clothing, rents, housefurnishings, helps, and all items of household expense has increased to such proportions that the problem of making the earnings cover the actual necessary outlay is becoming a serious one in every community. It is claimed that the uniformity of the price-scale of all food products all over the United States lends color to the charge that there is a strict agreement among corporations which handle them. All kinds of textile fabrics have advanced 30 to 50 per cent in price during the last five years, and the statistics of the department of labor and commerce show an increase in the cost of foods alone during the past ten years of 50 per cent. The increase of rents is attributed to the increase of sents is attributed to the increase oces of labor and building material—not to increased values of red estate. It is shown by the government's figures that the cost of bacon has advanced 435 per cent; pratacos, 43 1 per cent; pratacos, 43 1 per cent; pratacos, 43 1 per cent; four, 29.3 per cent, and corn meal 28.6 per cent. These are the articles selected by the bureau of labor as the staples of a workingman's bill of fare. The increase in the price of beef has been even greater than the figures here given, and other items of duch were increased accordingly."—Globe Democrat.

The Worship of Diamonds.

A McGill professor, lecturing on the diamond the other night, demonstrated dramatically the well-known fact that a diamond is merely crystalized carbon, by burning a couple of small stones in an electric arc. Flakes of graphite fell from the sides, and the whole became a mass of coke. Yet what has not been bought and sold for diamonds? It requires an expert to tell the difference between some of the imitations and the real stones. Peate diamonds are worn to great assemblies by great ladies while their genuine jewels repose sately in the vaults at home. Still, says the Montreal Herald, this does not induce other ladies, who cannot afford the genuine, to be quite as content with the paste. If some one were to discover a "mins" of diamonds and flood the world with them—if, it is said, the present diamond unners were to put on the market all they could—the value would zo down. In the two former cases it would well-nigh disappear. Yet to-day people will coin the toil of many men for will coin the toil of many men for the two former cases it would well-nigh disappear. Wonder of Plant Memory.

Plant memory is a problem for the inquisitive botanist, says the Dundee. Advertiser. In 1901 a plant allied to the squash and pumpkin was taken to New York from the desert of Secora, in Nexico, and since then it has been kept—without watering—in a strange climate 3,600 miles from home. During the six weeks, of rain in the desert the plant grows its leaves and flowers and perfects its seed. Then it dries up and leaves only a water-filled gourd, which a thick, hard shell seals sgainst animals and evaporation. The transplanted specimen allif remembers the rainy season of six weeks, it wakes, sende out rotoliets, stems and leaves, and then dries up again until the following year.

And now as to what the servant does. The true servant is busy about his Lord's business. It must be so, cles is he disloyal and unfaithful. To he a servant and unfaithful. To he access, indifferent, neglectful servant implies service. The idle carcless, indifferent, neglectful servant is no servant at all, and not worthy of the name. But what may we know of the life work of the true servant of the Lord? We may know first that it has helped work out the etanal purposes of God in the world. We may know in the second place that the measuring rod of eternity, not that of time, must be used. to declare the quantity and quality of the work. We may know also that the service rendered on earth was but the beginning of the service to be rendered in Heaven. What an inspiration in the thought that he who works and builds with God here works and builds with God here work and builds with God for tearnity.

And then there is the abiding influence of the true servant of God, which goes on and on in ever widening circles among men. This thought is expressed in the declaration concerning Abel, who offered acceptable saorifice to God, that "being dead, he yet speaketh." And from Abel down take the record of the true servants of the Lord acceptable saorifice to God, that "being dead, he yet speaketh." And from Abel down take the record of the true servants of the Lord and set forth in the Word of God, and who can estimate the influence which has gone out from those lives. Though dead, they continue to speak their message to the hearts of men, Joshua, the servant of the Lord. What a glorfous comment on his life. Servant of the Lord. What a glorfous comment on his life. Servant of the Lord. What a glorfous comment on his life. Servant of the Lord. What a glorfous comment on his life. Servant of the Lord. What a glorfous comment on his life. Servant of the Lord. What a glorfous comment on his life. Servant of the Lord. What a glorfous comment on his life. Servant of the worth of the Lord. What a glorfous comment on his life. Servant

THE STORY.

THE years following the conquest of Canaon and the division of the land among the various tribes, bringing as they did their peace, and seminity and prosperity—for the land brought forth abundantly—gave Joshua the rest he longed for and needed, for with the advancing years he had felt more and more the burdens of leadership. A feeling of contentment and satisfaction filled his heart as he beheld each tribe contented with the contented prof. is inheritance. The inheritacle had been set up in Shiloh, and the priests and Levites ministered before the Lord, while the people wershiped without at the appointed seasons. The mercles and bearings of the Lord were so fresh in mind, and the mighty victories which the Lord had given time were as no thought or desire to mingto with the healthen antions about them or to be even so much as drawn away-by idio curiosity in the worship of their idols.

erred to blind Joshus to any tendency towards waywardness on the part of the people, and for some time the blind to be and to some the season of the people, and for some time the weeks and months slipped by, and the weeks and months slipped by, and those about him realized that the Infirmities of age were telling upon him.

"No, It will not be long before the Lord will come for me," he said-one day. "But I am ready to go, for pence has come to the land and the people are wholly given to the serving of the Lord."

But that night his sleep was troubled, and he beheld strange things in his dreams. He thought Moses stood by his side and was polnting towards the people gathered before the tabernacle, and saying:

"How soon they will forget! As in former time so will they again turn from the Lord."

And as he turned to protest, Moses wanished from his alrett and he wooks

And as he turned to protest, Mos-s vanished from his sight and he awoke with a start.

The dream troubled him and for days he studied over it, until it seemed.

with a start.

The dream troubled him and for days he studied over it, until it seemed that it means have been a vision and not a dream, and that Moses had coully spicken to him. Would the people turn from the Lord after he had gone? Would they forget his mercies and blessings and go after the gods of the people about them? he asked himself, over and over again.

"Fefore I go I must warn them. My list messages shall be an appeal to them, to be faithful to the God who had been faithful to them."

And so Joshua sent his messengers through all the land whither the children of Israel had settled, asking that they all come to Shechem. Now Shechem was the place where solomn convocation had been held when they had first come into the land years before, and the blossings and the cursings of God had been read in their ears by the Levites. And it was here that Joshua gathered the people officers and judges, and said unto them:

"Thus saith to Lord God of Israel:
"Thus saith the lord God of Israel:
"Thus saith the Lord God of Israel:

officers and judges, and said unto them.

"Thus saith the Lord God of Israel: Your-fathers dwelt-on the other side of the flood in old-time, even Terah, the father of Abrahum, and the father of Nachor: and they served other sods. And I took your father Abraham from the other side of the flood, and led him throughout all the land of Cansan, and multiplied-his seed and gave him Israe. And I gave unto Israe Jave Lind Esau Mount Seir, to possess it; but Jacob and his children went down into Expt."

but Jacob and his children went down into Egypt."

Joshua paused in his hasty review of the early history of the nation, and if there had been any inattention at the beginning, at the meation of Egypt all cycs and ears were turned lowards him. He then went on to rupidly cover God's wonderful dealings with them in Egypt, of his leading, them out under the hand of Moses; of his miraculous deliverances and care all through the wilderness journey, and of his bringing them at last into the promised land and giving them the victory over all their nemice.

which dwelt in the land, which dwell we serve the Lord; for he is our God."

"Ye are witnesses against yourselves that ye have chosen the Lord, to serve him."

"We are witnesses."
So Joshua, the aged leader, made a rovenant with the people that day, and set them a statute and an ordinate in Shechem. And he wrote these words of the people in the book of the law of God, and took a great stone and set it we have a statute and an ordinate in Shechem. And he wrote these words of the people in the book of the law of God, and took a great stone and set it when under an oak, that was by the altar that had been rearred to the Lord in that place. And Joshua saft unto all the people: "Behold, this stone shall be a witness unto us; it shall be therefore a witness unto us; it shall be therefore a witness unto you lest ye deny your God."

Calling on an American consul in China, a Chinaman asked for tradecatalogues saying that he would prefer those with thick leaves, and it was aventually discovered that the catalogues were wanted as inside soles for shoes.

Users of paper throughout the country were last week notified by manufacturers and jubbers of a phenominal advance in the prices on all classes of papers and cardboards, the advance ranging from ten to twenty-five per cent, according to grade. Scarcity of raw material is given as the cause. Country newspapers and print-shops are pretty hard hit by the new schedules.

An Exciting Time.

John Baidon, Charlie Westbay and Orin Phipps had a considerable mix-up with their teams out at Jas. D. Cloud's, where they went after hay. They had about all the hay on their wagons, when they discovered that there were several rabbits under the stack, and they called to John Cloud to come over to where they were and bring his shot gun. When he arrived and was told that a large number of rabbits was under the tack, he doubted the propriety of using the gun so close to the teams, but was assured by the owners that there was no danger whatever of the teams causing any trouble, so the fun began, and seven shots had been fired and three rabbits killed, when Orin Phipps' team started to run and struck the rear of John Baldon's load, and started his horses, but, fortunately, he was close enough to eatch and stop them. By this time Charlie Westbay's horses became excited and be gain to cut capers, but he had dropped the traces of one, and all they could do was to put the wagon tongue in jeopardy. While this excitement was in progress Phipps' team continued their mad career and ran some distance, when the load of hay was turned over and the hay frame damaged badly. It took some, time to, get the teams traightened out and the men's nerves quieted sufficiently for them to return home with their hay, the wrecked wagon being left at the seene. These hay hauling into a rabbit hunt, and will prefit by their experience of last Friday.

She was a daughter of Jesse and Jane Forter Kelly, who passed to their reward many years ago. Few people there are who have spent so long a life under the identical roof-tree where they were born, surrounded by a large circle of friends and immediate relatives. Miss Amanda was a member of no church but lead a copiestent christian life, always ready to administer to the wants of the needy. The case of the condomned nurderer, who the other day practically

One famona parallel instance was that of Rev. Mr. Hackman, who shot an actress. Miss Reay, as she was leaving the stage door of Convent Garden theater, and who, although actually offered a cumulatior, preferred to die upon the gallows in the explation of his erime.

Only a few weeks back, again, the cerlin papers chronicled the case of a wealthy land owner, who, having shot a servant in a fit of nassion, tried him, with himself as judge, and sentenced himself to ten years' solitary confluement in one of his own private dangeons in his own medieval castle in the heart of the Bisek Forest.

Niue years and spine odd months of this punishment he actually endured, his house steward doling ithin out dally
a meager ration of coarse prison fare.
Unitackily for him, however, the anthorities got to hear of the affair and he was haled before the ordinary tritunnal to awit his trial in due course.
Another extraordinary case also, curiously enough, of German origin, was that of a seigeant anafor of an infaintry regiment stationed in Bremen, who a few weeks back sentenced himself to be shot by a signad of his own men. The soldlers thought they were fring binak, but the self-condemned man had surreptitiously removed the harmless cartridges and substituted

Intelligent Pharmacy.

One of the ablest physicians in New York was in financial siraits in his young days, and looked long and hard for a job. Finally he was engaged in a smell shop in Oberty street, in the midst of sallors' boarding houses "and sich." One night a woman asked for an ounce of some deadly polson. What are you going to do with it? said the young pharmacist. She replied quickly: "I am going to drink it; I am weary of living! I shall commit suichet." In that case," she he, "I won't seil it to you; you will have to obtain it clsewhere." She laughed. "Oh, do you take me for a fool? If I wanted to kill myself do you suppose I'd tell you? Homestly, I want the medicine for my husband, a longshoreman, who is in great distress." "That's different," said our young friend, who thereupon sold the poison and made ler sign for it. As she passed out of the door she yelled in maulac tones: "Ya, ya! I got you that time! [Il be in hell in seven minutes!"

Colors to the Blind.

"Have you say conception of color!" a friend asked a blind man. "What idea have you when yon hear colors mentioned?"

"A person blind from birth as I have been can have no possible proper conception of color," was the reply. "To me color is sound, or rather, music. When I hear the word red, for example, I instantly shink of a high plerching note of music; blue is to me a delicately sounded note fairly high and pleasing in tone; green is a soft tone and rather low, quiet and restrict, while yellow is lively, quick little notes rapidly sounding and causing pleasure, aimost to laughter. Black, alas! is the only color we can realize, for we are told that that is the absence of all light, and we know only too well what that means."

Garbed Like Player Queen.

As she came into the corridor of the opera house every woman's cye turned in her direction, attracted by the curious head covering howers. It looked like one of the crowns a player wears in a Shakespearean play, since it consisted of nothing but a band of heavy gold braid, of the kind known technically as "galoon," with a circular top to it fashioned of purple velvet. Around her neck she wore a thin sear of a shade that toned in with the color of the velvet and the final touch of Shakespearean guigestion was added when she lifted up her skirts, ilscloaling her natices clad in mave vilk stockings and her feet covered with a pair of sandals in manve colored kid through the openings in which the stockings could be plainly seen.

Connecticut's Bad Second

Connecticut's Bad Record.

Connecticut is usually regarded as a safe and pleasant place to live in, and yet it had 43 murders is 1996, where Maine had only two. To be sure, Connecticut has more people than Maine, but, not so very usual more; it has fewer than 1,000,000, while Maine has 725,000. It is fair to state that it was an unusualty had year for the old Nutmeg state in this respect, as its 43 murders are more than it ever had before in a single year, and 17 more than the annual average for the last decade.—Kennebec Journal.

"They have added a department to the university for the education of dogs, and what I wish to singsest, dad is that you send Jack en, together with the necessary tuttion, $1,000, and at the end of the year he will be theroughly versed in English, Spanish, French and Latin."

The letter had its effect and Jack, who was the family bull pup, arrived in due time, as did also the check for his tuition. When Jim returned home at the end of the year the uniter family was at the railroad depot, but he soon found they were waiting for Jack.

"Jack' so wee, from the moment Jack arrived at Harvard he made a hit he pitched right into the studies, took the medal in Latin, led his class in French and was a proficient English scholar within two weeks. And among the boys Jack was a leader."
The son paused a moment.
"Go on," urged his father.
"Well on the train coming home Jack and I were sitting together, when he terned to me.
"The," he said, 'our college days are over and weament now knuckle drink." Well, we had a drink, for Jack was popular among the other than the town of the same setting op the drinks for Jack was popular among the other passengers in the buffet car and he was setting up the drinks for all. "Jim, he said, I don't like to mention this to you, but I suppose it is my duty to do so. Now, that old man if yours. Of course, I don't like to knock, but you see while you were spending your first hree years at college, I had an opportunity to observe the actions of your father. Now, Jim, while you were away and while you mother was absent from home, the old man used to give wine to chorus girls and there was general high finks at the house.

"When Jack told me this, dad," continued the son, "I became so angry with him that I just grabbed him by the neck and threw him from the car window."

"That's right, my boy," said the father, patting, his son on the shoulder; "to bell with Jack."

A certain city anariment house dweller had been somewhat slow in paying his rent, and the agent finally called in person to see him.

Twice Retired from Navy.
To be twice honorably retired from the country's service, either mayal or military, comes to few men.
"Capt." Heorge G. So much has been said about the hreaking of colts that it hardly seems as if there is anything else to say, but the importance of the subject is full justification for a repetition of what may have been said. What is a horse worth unless he has good manners and is under full subjection? Without these, he should be put to such use as will not require them in any great measure; but surely be should not be used except by the best horsemen. Some can handle almost any horse, but there are others who will have trouble with the best. Such a man should be careful to get only the kind that is well broken and has good manners; and let the other fellow, that thinks he can handle any of them, have the bad ones at what they are worth, and you will nearly always find someone who will take the chances.

Congo Reform.

Prospects are encouraging for a reform of the outrageons abuses in the administration of affairs in-the Congo Independent State. The natives in that vast equatorial region have been treated with an incredible inhumanity. They have been forced to labor for the companies that deal in rubber; cannibals have been employed as guards over the rubber gatherers; little children have been bound out to labor for long terms of years; the administration of justice has been so bad that the name of the place where the chief courts sit is regarded as a word of ill omen. Men, women and children have been mutilated and beaten and otherwise multicated and beaten and otherwise multicated and beaten and otherwise multicated at present by the king of the Bolgians. In 1859 the king of the Bolgians in 1859 the king of the Bolgians in 1850 the ligitum made an agreement by which it secured power to annex the territory after ten years. Reform, explains Youth's Companion, is likely to come through the assumption by the Belgian parliament of its powers under this agreement. The chamber of representatives voted last mouth to annex the territory, and the senate may have approved the plan before this paper is in the hands of its readers. When this is done, irresponsible personal government will cease. The king, who has been an autocrat in the Congo, will have no more power there than he has in Belgium. Responsibility for the government will cease. The king, who has been an autocrat in the Congo, will have no more power there than he has in Belgium. Responsibility for the government will cease. The king, who has been an autocrat in the Congo, will have no more power there than he has in Belgium. Can They Be Forstold?

The Jamaica calemity has revived the discussion as to whether carthquakes can be foretold, and scientists do not seem to be able to reach any conclusive opinion on the subject. Some of them are certain that there are phenomena which indicate such disturbances but others have their doubts. There have been some curlous prophecies, a London meteorologist having on Saturday predicted that there would soon be two earthquake shocks in America, and doubtless he will claim the Jamaica catastrophe and the tremor said to have been felt in Pennsylvania as a fulfillment. But it will be observed that her word and no one knows on what his calculation was based. It may have been, and in the minds of many who want proof and not mere assertion was, nothing but guesswork, much after the generalizations of "weather prophets" who fool the credulous by pretensions to knowledge which when analyzed prove to be the shallowest of charlatanry. At all events, says the Troy Times, the world at large is not yet satisfied that any reliable method of orcetelling earthquakes has been found. Authoritative warnings of such events might be the means of saving many lives, even if damage to property could not be averted.

Every year in the Rumal country, India, a marriage lottery—a sort of property could not be averted.

Every year in the Rumai country, India, a marriage lottery—a sort of sweethearts sweep—is held. The names of all the marriagcable girls and of the young men of the circle who want to get married are written on. slips of paper and thrown into separate earthern pots. From these they are drawn washinst one another by the local wise man. This simply determines the fact that the Rumai girl has come out and is ready to be married, and the youth whose name is drawn against hers thereby obtains a particular letter of introduction, with authority to make love limmediately with what ardor and success he is capable of.

New York, Feb. 20.—Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw entered upon the order!
of her cross-examination, and before District Attorney Jerome had the witness in charge for half an hour he had secured from the court a ruling which apparently opens the way for bringing into the trial of Harry K. Thaw all manner of evidence which may tend to discredit the defendant's wife.
Herestofore it hus been held that the Herstofore it hus been held that the rules of evidence protected young Mrs.

Thaw, and that regardless whether her story was true or false the fact that she had told it to her husband was the one essential point.
Mrs. Thaw had been allowed to repeat the story so that the jury might judge as to its effect on unbalancing the mind of the man on trial for the murder of Stanford White.
Mr. Jerome, by a simple queetten, opened the way for the incoluction

Says Story Was True.

He asked the witness: "Was the story you told Mr. Thaw true?"
"It was," she replied firmly.

Mr. Delmas, Thaw's leading competenced objected strongly to the question, but Justice Fitzgerald held it to be competent as tending to show the credibility of the witness.

Whether or not Mr. Jerome Intends to take advantage of the ruling in an attempt to throw doubt upon the truth of the story, or whether Justice Fitzgerald intended his ruling to cover the whole subject of Mrs. Thaw's evidence, the future conduct of the case alone can determine. Mr. Delmas will continue to fight with constant objections the Introduction of any testimony as to events in the young woman's lite, but the subject or credibility of a witness is a wide one, and Justice Fitzgerald indicated that he would be rules in that respect.

The district attorney seemed reluctant to begin the cross-examination of Mrs. Thaw, desiring to have the matter postponed until Thurstay morning in order that he might determine whether or not a further examination of the witness was necessary on the issues involved in the case.

his official duties he kept a diary, which, after a hundred years, is strangely interesting. This diary came to light in 1861 in the old Pennsylvania Magazine, and read through from the first entry on Nov. 19 it indicates, as nothing else could, the wearing effect of the times and circumstances. On Dec. 11 the hardships of Valley Forge have begun to tell on this surgeon to the continental army.
He writes:
"I am prodigious sick and cannot get fit of sickness in this place, where

But I doubt not providence will find a way for my relief, only I cannot eat

Twelve days later he begins with a tribute to the endurance and patience of the soldiery, followed with loud protestings for himself and his

ART OF KEEPING YOUNG

ration of Youth Largely Matte

Everybody realizes that there is an art in keeping young, but only a few people know that it does not require an inhora talent. They will say to you, "Oh, of course, Mrs. Smith looks young—doesn't she come of a family who stay young"—just as if the art of Keeping young were something that could be inherited.

It is something that every woman desires, of course, both for the sake of sratifying her vanity and of preserving her health. She knows that if she can solve the secret she will not only enjoy life and the reflection her mirror throws back to her, but that she will be a source of envy to her less fortunate sisters, and what woman did not enjoy the latter sensation most keenly?

less fortunate sisters, and what woman did not enjoy the latter sensation most keenly?
I don't know whether you are one of the unfortunates, but if you are, you may cheer up right away, fof' to can be done. I knew a woman once who, although past 60, had not a gray hair in her head, who had eyes as bright as a girl, and who walked with the same springs, clastic gait that her smooth and as pink as a baby's, and her arms and hands as rounded and as dimpled as her granddaughter's.

Her throat was a little wrinkled, but when she was dressed for the street you would have sworn she was not a day over 35.

In her case I think the secret was that she had a trick of throwing oft trouble, and of always looking on the bright side of things. She had had more than her share of trouble, too, for she had lost five children, and two of the remaining four had not turned out well. Besides that, her husband had falled in business, thus reducing her from luxury to a position of comparative poverty.

But she kept her bright eyes and her given half to the very last. Instead of reckening—up—how much her brown half to the very last. Instead of reckening—up—how much frouble she had, and how badly fate had treated her, she counted up her blessings, and noted how much more harshly fate had treated her neighbors; says a writer in the Los Angeled Herald. She sympathized with other people's troubles rather than her own, and thus kept her mind so busy that she had no time for self-pity. You may note right here that self-pity is one of the greatest emmits to youth that was ever known. Another is worry. Now, worry in rilleulous on the very face of it, for it was never known to control nor to reveal the future yet, and as it Gannot do either of these things, what is the use of letting it spoil your complexion:

Beginning with the American discoveries of John Cabot in 1497, the search for the northwest passage was for many years the object of rival expeditions from Denmark, England, France and Portugal, says A. Cure by Cuticura.

"My baby was about nine months old when she had rash on her face and feet. Her feet seemed to irritate her most, especially nights. They would cause her to be broken in her rest, and sometimes she wond cry until she was tired out. I had always used Cuticura Soap myself, and had heard of so many cures by the Cuticura Remedies that I thought I would give them a trial. The improvement was noticeable in a few hours, and before I had used one box of the Cuticura Olintment her feet were well land have never troubled her since. I also used it to remove what Is known as "cradic cap" from her head, and it worked like a charm, as it claemed and healed the scalp at the same time. Now I keep Cuticura Olintment on hand in case of any little rash or insect bites, as it takenout the inflammation at ouce. Perhaps this may be the means of helping other sunfering babies. Scnaitiveness of Deer.

How sensitive deer are in the matter of food was proved once again during the hearing of a case at Peliham, England, where three men were charged with sleeping in a deer pen in Bushey park. A keeper said they had pulled down from the racks about ten shillings worth of hay, which the deer would not afterward touch because it had been lain upon. In fact, the deer would not go near the pens, as the men had slept there.

A STORY OF THE PERIOD OF THE JUDGES IN ISSAEL

Scripture Authority: - Judges 8:

Scripture Authority: Judges 3: 1.11.

The Man of the Hour.—It has been said that grave criese-create great leaders, Stricity apeaking, this is not true.

They do not create.

They do not create.

They do not create.

They rovsal.

That is, the leader has been in the process of making during all the years which have gone before and the great is sues when they arise find him prepared and ready to meet them.

The need of the hour has been the door of opportunity by which the man of the hour could step forth and show what manner of man he was.

It is the shallow reader of history, indeed, who estimates the great characters with the measuring rod of chance and fawrable opportunity.

That the boy is father of the man was never more true than with those who have stamped their personality and character on the pages of history.

The discipline, the influences, the struggles, the victories of the barrier years was the rugged, attern pathway which led to the place of great opportunities.

Way back through the years there has been the gathering of wirength, of skill, of moral courage, of mental vigor for the doing of the great task of delivering from the apprecasion of the Mesopotamian king, had been preparing for that hour all through the long years which had gone before.

the long years which had gone before. We read that "the Spirit of the 4.ord came upon him" and then he "judged Israel and went out to war."

But let us remember that it was the prepared man upon whom the power of God came for the doing of the mighty deed.

for the doing of the mighty deed.

There is a good deal of silly dearning on the part of people of what they might and would do it they had the Spirit of God to ald them.

Shame be to such, who have never fearned the sacredness of the daily task, and stood the testing of the daily discipline.

God uses tried men. God's spirit comes upon prepared men.

God uses tried men. God's spifft comes upon prepared men.
Oh, that boys and girls, young men and young women, would awaken to the truth that the present living is shaping the future destiny; that the man of the hour of to-morrow is in the walking to-day.

THE STORY.

THE STORY.

SIN's a treacheous guide, a mighty Coopiustro, a relentiess task master. He leads by pleasant paths at first to the ambuscade where the leads where the south of the meshed and overthrown, and then he turns as the hard task-master and exacts his tibule.

Thus it was with the children of terael. They did evil in the sight of the Lepil and served Baalin, and forsook the Lord Got of their fathers, so that the Lord delivered them, into the hands of spollers that spoiled them and into the hands of their enemies round about, so that they could not any longer stand bofore, them, and they were in great discress.

Things had gone from bed in them, and they were in great dis-trees.

Things had gone from bad to worse and! at last the king of Mes-potamia had descended upon the land, had subdued the cities, and had ex-acted a targe tribute, which was srievous burden for the people to bear. And if the full amount of the treasure, was not forthcoming he sent his soldlers to force payment.

Now whon the people of Israel be-gan first to mingle with the people about them, there were those in 1s-rael who raised the voice of warn-ing and protest, that God had said that they should have no dealings with the nations about them, but the cry of bigory and parrow-minedeness was raised, and the few found them-selves signaling alone in their loy-ality to God. They were branded as cranks and semica of the true prog-ress of the nation, and the progress-ty and liberal element pointed to to God. They make and enomics of the true prog-s of the nation, and the progress-and liberal element pointed to growing prosperity of the nation prove that the free intercourse in the neighboring nations was a m which it would be folly to cut off. Why should they be so short-sight-ed as to lose the opportunities lying right at their door of profitable trade? Why should they not sell to them what they could and buy in return those things which seemed desirable? Why should they be so straighthered and exclusive?—Had-not Moses and Joshua been allogether too strict? Then altions about were disposed to be friendly, and why should they be sny the loss kindly disposed towards them?

Thus the people reasoned, and would not listen to the "artian few who strove to atem the popular wide open policy. And not only did the leaders among the iberials speak disparagingly of these, but in various way, they eassed persecutions to be made upon them.

Now among those who had remained true to the precepts and teachings of Moses and Joshua and opposed the popular movement was Othniel, who in the days of Joshua had so bravely fought sgalmst the strong cities of Canaan and had overthrown by his own prowess Kir Jishespher, and had thereby won the beautiful Achsah as his wife. The bitter enmity of those who were leading Israel astray scened to center sipon him and he found it expedient to withdraw from the midat. I strong and the strong the stron of Israel and to dwell in a portion of his inheritance quite apart from them.

When this had been accomplished the false leaders congratulated them selves that now there was no hindrance to their modernizing the nation of Israel and making it like the great nations about them. In oider to do this it was deemed necessary to introduce some of the social customs of the other mitions, and this led to inter-marriages, and it was not long before the strange gods of the other intions had found their way into the cities of the Israelites.

"And why should they not?" asked the liberals. "Do not these, our neighbors, sojourn among as to buy and sell, and why should we refuse to let them have their gods to worship and serve, even as we worship and serve our God?"

Then as they became familiar with the more feative and elaborate service of the heathen worship, they began to feel'that the worship was corrupted, until finally it was an easy and natural step to share with these laters associates and neighbors in the feative worship of the strange gods.

More than once Othniel and the few who had stood with him had

More than once Othniel and the few who had stood with him had cried out against this thing, but had met with such sharp rebuff and ridicule, that with great sorrow of heart they ceased further protest. realizing that they must let the evil run its course.

And the evil was not long in bringing its penalty, for, weakened by their simil indulgences, they were unable to withstand the demands of the king of Mesopotamia, who, learning of the richness of the country, descended upon it and placed it under reliunt. Then was it that the burelium. ing of the richness of the country, de-scended upon t and placed it under tribute. Then was it that the bur-dens of oppresselon rested heavily upon the land. The king demanded more and more and as the tribute money was increased, the taskmas-ters multiplied to collect the same. For cight long bitter years did they serve this noweful king and they For eight long bitter years did they serve this powerful king, and they found that the friends and associates from among the nations about them were no longer kindly disposed to wards them, but sought by many ways to trouble them and rob them of their sustenance. In these sore straits the people be gan to call upon the name of their God, and repented of their folly in going after the gods of the people about them and in following their customs.

One day a group of men had gath

Customs.

One day a group of mea had gathered and were bemoaning their unhappy condition.

"Ah, if we had only listened to Othniel and the few who counseled with him," exclaimed one. "Where, now, is our boasted prosperity? Where now are the friends we made among the nations about us? Where now is the greatness and glory of our nation? Gone! Gone! And what hope is there for us? "Where shall, we go for one to help us."

At these words they all shook their leads sorrowfully and were about to separate, when one of them spoke up and said:

"Let us go to Othniel. It may be that he will help us."

"Dut what can Othniel do against this powerful king of Mesopotamia?" spoke up another, dejectedly.

"But nevertheless let us go anyway," urged the other.

And even as they went the spirit of the Lord came upon Othniel and he went forth and met them in the way, and when he had gathered to himself an army he went out and made war upon the king of Mesopotamia and the Lord delivered him into Othniel's hand, and he Judged the land, and the nation had peace for dy cars, even during the life of Othniel.

JUDGE B. F. MENEFEE.

In its proper place in this issue of the RECORDER appears the announcement of Judge B. F. Menefee, of Grant county, as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Circuit Court Judge at the primary election to be held on the 2nd day of next April. Judge Menefee is filling the vacancy in the circuit judgeship in the Fifteenth Judicial District occasioned by the resignation of Judge Lassing when he was elevated to the appellate bench by Governor Beckham.

Judge Menefee is a citizen of Grant county, where he was born and raised on a farm. He descended from pioneer stock, and is one of a large family, several of his brothers being protessional men of distinction. Judge Menefee was of a literary turn of mind when only a youth, and before reaching his majority he graduated from the National Normal University at Lebanon, Ohio, when he commenced teaching school and reading law, and to be an honored disciple of Blackstone was an achievement upon which he determined early in life. In 1882 his name was enrolled among those of the practicioners the Grant county bar, since which time he has devoted all his energies to his chosen profession, of which he has made a success, and before he was a gootted to the time he has devoted all his energies to his chosen profession, of which he has made a success, and before he was appointed to the Circuit Judgship by Gov. The order under which the primary election for Circuit Judge will be held puts the candidates at a disadvantage in this county in that it forbids the use of money, liquor or property in the interest of candidates, while the order calling the primary election to nominate a candidate for the legislature is silent on that subject. The two primaries will be held on the same day in this county, and the orders should have been uniform so far as possible to make them. It would be just as easy to enforce the 'whisky' resolution in the county primary as in the Judicial primary, and had it been embodied in the county call the candidates for the two offices would be on an equal footing. The resolution is one that commends itself, and has been made a success in other counties, and Boone has missed a splendid opportunity to give it a thorough trial. It is to be hoped that neither of the candidates for Circuit Judge will be made to suffer by reason of the silence of the county, primary order on a subject that is so forcibly denounced in the order under which they make their canvass.

About 11 o'clock, last Friday morning, the town was thrown into a commotion by a lusty colored boy coming up Jefferson street at a 2 minute gait, shouting fire at the top of his voice. In less than a minute the bucket brigade was dut in full force and hurrying to the residence of D. E. Castleman at the south part of town, where it had been learned the destroying element was getting in its work, but by the time the fire-fighters had arrived at the house it was announced that the fire was out, very much to the relief of not only the family, but to those who had come to make a desperate fight to save then nice, home of Mr. Castleman. It seems that the soot in the chimmey had caught fire and the muslin and paper over a hole for a stovepipe in a flue had been ignited and burnt, making an ugly blaze that frightened the family, when the alarm was given.

"One like this," said the woman, holding up an attractive advertising print.

"I may have one or two of them-left," the proprietor said, "but I haven't many of them."

The woman said she only wanted one, and her tone indicated that she was anxious for that one. She explained that the one she had with her had been given to one of her children. Another child, she stated, was sick, and was crying for a picture such as his brother had.

That's a bad way to bring up your children, "ventured a woman customer in the store. "Do you try to give a child everything he cries for just because his brother is more fortunate?"

"But," said the mother of the children, "you don't know. The children are twins and what one has the other wants."

"Suppose," objected the moralist, when your children get older, they

But the mother was ready. She promptly replied:

DREADED TO EAT.

A Quaker Couple's Experience.

How many persons dread to eat their means, although actually hungry nearly all the time!

Nature never intended this should be so, for we are given a thing called appetite that should guide us as to what the system needs at any time and can digest.

But we get in a hurry, swallow our food very much as we shovel coal into the furnace, and our sense of appetite becomes unnatural and perverted. Then we eat the wrong kina of food or eat too much, and there you are—indigestion and its accompanying miseries.

One of the Important Duties of Physicians and the Well-Informed of the World

is to learn as to the relative standing and reliability of the leading manufacturers of medicinal agents, as the most eminent physicians are the most careful as to the uniform quality and perfect purity of remedies prescribed by them, and it is well known to physicians and the Well-Informed generally that the California Fig Syrup Co., by reason of its correct methods and perfect equipment and the ethical character of its product has attained to the high standing in scientific and commercial circles which is accorded to successful and reliable houses only, and, therefore, that the name of the Company has become a guarantee of the excellence of its remedy.

This valuable remedy has been long and favorably known under the name of—Syrup of Figs—and has attained to world-wide acceptance as the most excellent of family laxatives, and as its pure laxative principles, obtained from Senna, are well known to physicians and the Well-Informed of the world to be the best of natural laxatives, we have adopted the more elaborate name of—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—as more fully descriptive of the remedy, but doubtless it will always be called for by the shorter name of Syrup of Figs—and to get its beneficial effects always note, when purchasing, the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package, whether you simply call for—Syrup of Figs—or by the full name—Syrup of Figs—and belixir of Senna—is the one laxative remedy manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. and the same heretofore known by the name—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—is the one laxative remedy manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. and the same heretofore known by the name—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—is the one laxative remedy manufactured by t

AN INVESTIGATION AND INQUIRY

Twenty Dead, Two Fataily Hurt ar 146 Others More or Less Seri-ously Injured.

New York, Feb. 13.—Twenty dead, two fatally hurt and 145 others more or less seriously lajured is the result of the wreck of the electric express train of the New York Central railroad, at 206th street-and Webster avenue. Of the large number of the in jured 50 are, according to hospital and police reports, seriously hurt and the death list may be increased within the next 24 hours. Most of the others are suffering from lacerations or shock, and will recover.

This was a day of investigation and inquiry by representatives of the district attorney's office, the coroner, and the police. When daybreak came-the police lists of dead had increased to 18, an hour afterward two more deaths were reported and it is believed two additions will be made to the list.

The cause of the wreck is still a master of speculation.

All night laspector Flood, of the police department, Coroner Schwanecke and Ansistant District Attorney Smyth, together with other members of the district attorney's force, looked over the scene and sought to determine the cause of the deralment of the train. The result of their investigation may become known when the inquest is held.

The wreckage was completely clear ed away. All four of the tracks of the New York Central through the rocky cut where the train left the rails and several of the cars went to lecce, had been restored, the third rail replaced and traffic resumed practically under normal conditions.

At the Webster avenue police stadion lay eleven mangled boiles, they of the other incores and the cars seek they do not not refer to presons seeking to identify the remaining bodies continued.

Insects have their own public houses, and get intoxicated just like human beings, was the charge made by Prof. Bottomley in a lecture at the University of London, South Kensingston. The leading public house in the insect world, according to Prof. Bottomley, is the wild arum. To the Growers of the Burley District:
Dear Friends:—The past 30 days have been the most wonderful in the history of American farming. Our pool closed January 12th last and the Board of Directors met in Winchester on the 15th following without a single plan perfected for caring for the two-thirds of the 1906 Burley crop which had been placed in their hands-by their feltow larmers to handle and sell. How well placed that confidence was is shown by the facts accomplished. At that meeting plans were formed which have been sufficient to overcome difficulties that seemed instirmountable; and now those that the feat of a souther at the idea of a souther the fished. As that meeting p-mission formed which have been sufficient to overcome difficulties that seemed insufmountable; and now those who at first seefled at the idea of a "lot of larmers" sticking together and doing something are opening their eyes in amazement at the marvelous success we have achieved. Every county in the District has financed its crop or arranged to do so, a thing that has wrecked all our previous organizations. The ease with which it was accomplished has been a surprise even to ourselves. The banks have been eager to secure our patronage, and we have been able to other collateral that is gilt edged. Every county in the District has secured ware house accommodations or arranged to do so for such part of the crop as it will be necessary to care for at once, and everywhere the owners, who do not need the assistance of the financier and the waterhousemen, are tackling the job of handing their own crops with a confidence that augurs success; and in most of the counties, the Boards of Control have supervisors who will watch these outside crops and see

This should be looked possible, This should be looked after carefully in every county. These shings have been done without any precedents to guide the County Boards and no man who is not one of them can appreciate the unselfsh labor and worry they have endured in order that their fellow men might be benefitted. The tobacco growers will be grateful and every man, woman and child in the Burley District ought to remember with this/likeliheart these men who have "made brivase without straw," who have made something of great value where formerly there was nothing. Besides all this, in most of the counties the campaign for the 1907 crop is already on; and this is the key to the campaign for the 1907 crop the world's tobacco buyers will be knocking at the doers of every warehouse under our control within a very short time; and before the firth is over well and maybe more. And bitterly did they repent of their folds with the first the friends and associates of the Mosbites, and then their slaves. What deep hunsilisation it was for them, and how as the years dragged on and the heavy tribute was collected, the people yearned for deliversance and a restoration to their old-time power and influence. Sin is a hard taskmaster, and he exacts full measure of penalty for every indulgence granted. And so it was with the children of Israel, For 18 long years the heavy hand of King Eglon was fell.

During the latter half of this period Ednich bils apparent loyally to the first the serviced ended the size of the content of the period Ednich whis apparent loyally to years the heavy hand of King Egton was felt.

During the latter half of this period Ehnd by his apparent loyalty to King Egton, won the latter's favor and confidence and was entrusted not only with the task of receiving the tax money from the people, but with carrying the same to the king at the royal city. When there had been in cipient revolts against the payment of the tax he advised submission, pointing out that it were cully to invite greater hardship and a henvier tax to rebel. And when this led the people to distrust him, some openly charging him with disloyalty to his own people and his God, he made no reply, which was taken by the people as an admission of guilt.

Now Fland had bledged himself in the secrecy of his own heart to the task of helping Israel to deliverance, and he realized that he could, not trust himself to the counsels of his people, lest the king should be led to "visicola him. In fact, he knew that the very hostility and resentment of his people against him would strengthen the king's faith in him, and perhaps give him the opportunity he sought of striking an effective blow for independence.

Thus as time went on the breach hetween Ehnd and his brethren grew wider and wider, and at last the latter entered into a conspiracy against him. The time had arrived for the taking of the annual present to the king, and behud was busy gathering the treasure, all unconscious of the plan to lie lu wait for him as he depared for the south that he was the way Fahad who parted for the royal city, to kill him and seize the treasure.

Tidings of this thing in some way reached the ears of the king, and he sent his servants to war Ehud, who, as soon as he understood the temper of the people, realized that the time had come for him to act.

Now up to this time there was not a weapon in all Israel, savie such as the solders of the king carried, neither was it possible to obtain the metal out of which to make them. Howevere, Ehud, in the present extremity, succeeded in obtaining a frament from the side of one of the king's bronze charlots which had been broken, and all that night he labored in fashioning it into a long dagger, putting a keen edge ou both sides of the blade. This he gifded upon his right side, for he was as clever in the use of, his left hand as his right, and the next morning took up his journey with those who had been appointed to go with him. But Instead of Kolir by the usual route he made a detour and thus safely arrived before the king and having presented the off-fering, he departed with those with him.

Now he had scarcely gotten beyond the court of the graven images which surrounded the palace of the king when he suddenly turned himself back, and sealn sought the presence of the king when he suddenly turned himself to his summer house in the midst of the garden, where he went each day tor rest, but when he understood who it was who desdred to see him he or diered that he he admitted, supposing that he had some secret message concerning he piol which the children of lerael had under against him.

Now, King Belon was exceedingly fat, and so as Ehnd drew near and bent over to whisper in his car_the king could not disseen—that Ehnd's left hand had grasped the dagage—which lay concealed beneath the folds of his roghs. And as he waited for his dear, so that he give not so much as a groan, so swiftly was the blow struck. And Ehnd secaped, eren as the Scritture states, and having called is real together, he led them to victory against the Moshites.

POSSIBLE OPPORTUNITY TO BE-CURE TARIFF REFORM.

Representatives.

The extraordinary proposition of the German government, which, it is said, will be contained in the report of the tariff commission which has nearly concluded its investigations and agreements with the German tariff experts at Herlin, that the export-price of products from that country shall be fixed by the German government, will hardly be ratified by congress. This ultimatum to offset our high tariff rates as a compensation to Germany-for-acceding to us her-nithmum rates of duty for our products is unlooked for and unparalleled, for it virtually nullifies section 32 and 11 of the act of 1890, which provides the manner of determining the true value of goods in the exporting country at the time of stantly increasing the valuation of goods, which thus increases the duty paid.

Such increase in valuation is what the German government wants to avoid hy having this country agree to receive her products at the special valuation the German government undertakes to provide. Such an agreement cannot be made without congressional action modifying the sections of the present tariff act above referred to. It will be impossible for the present congress to amend the law before it adjourns on March 4, for the whole question of tariff revision would naturally arise. It is possible under a special rule to force such a bill through the house of representatives virtually without debate, for doubtless the subservious Republican majority would siree to it, yet it will be impossible for such a measure to pass the senate, where there is no such gag rule.

As the present arrangement with Germany to admit our products at the minimum tariff rates expires on July 1, and It cannot be expected that an extension-of-time will be granted. Generally as congress has made no move towards tariff revision, it would seem probable that the president will feel constrained to call an extra session of congress immediately inpun flow of the form of the present congress on March 4. As all the trusts and other inter-

As all the trusts and other interests protected by the tariff will in the event of a special session be represented before congress by attorneys and lobby ist, at is advisable for anyone who feels the pinch of high trust prices to inform their representatives and senators that they will expect rerelief by a reasonable reduction of the rates of duty on trust products. Even those representatives and senators reputed to be controlled by the trusts and corporations are not entirely oblitions to make a support of the resulting and corporations are not entirely oblitions to make a support of the resulting and corporations are not entirely oblitions to make a support of the resulting and corporations are not entirely oblitions to make a support of the resulting to the resulting the result these representatives and senators reputed to be controlled by the trusts and corporations are not entirely oblivious to public opinion, if it is freely expressed. The solid Democratic membership of both houses of congress of congress can be relied upon to stand for a bill that will make a reasonable reduction in tariff rates. As the Sixtleth congress has a Republican members to act with the Democrats to pass a bill that will produce real reform of the present rates that allow the industrial corporations to plunder the people by present bigh prices. What is to be feared is a bogus reform bill wheich will patch up our differences with Germany and Canada but still leave the trusts protected, so that there will be no relief to the people from the present high cost of living.

Frog Industry Barred.

The little fish and weak sisters in congress are always ready to "stand by the speaker and the president" in any event. They may be "in doubt" about how their constituents stand on important issues and very wab-bly themselves, on such a question as ship subsidy for instance, but when the speaker and president approved that measure they felt that they could vote for the steal with safety. They are always always they did it. They are willing to give up their own opinions sinding to give up their own opinions and go contrary to the wishes of their constituents lest they be guilty of a failure to oblige the source of all portions that they could such as a contrary to the wishes of their constituents lest they be guilty of a failure to oblige the source of all portions that they constituent sets they seeker and the president.

But recommending laws to control corporations and ever enacting such is useless unless the laws are enforced—that is what hrings results. Wheat Sold by 20 Different Measures in Great Britain.

In Great Britain.

The advocates of the metric system want no better justification than tables just prepared for the year book of the British Auctioneers' institute. It is learned from this that the price of wheat is made and the cereal is sold in 20-different ways in England. Scotland and Wales.

It is measured variously by the quarter, comb. load, boil, bushel, barrel, hundredweight, cental, windle and bohbet, Further confusion is caused hyvarying weights of a hushel in different parts of the country. A boil is three hushels in some places and from and six in othes. There are similar absurd variations hother weights and measures.

For instance, a stone of meat is eight pounds, a stone of rheese 15 pounds and a stone of hemp 23 pounds.

There are seven different areas of the standard acre in Great Britain. The vagaries of liquid measures are equally bewidering.

Raymondville, Tex., Feb. 19, —
This town is in the central part of Cameron County, Texas, which county lies along the Guil Coast and is bordered by the Rio Grande River on the south. The St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexico Railway traverses the county from north to south.

At Raymondville last spring a field of corn attained a height of eight feet without rain or irrigation, simply from the moisture that, was stored in the roll. After that it required irrigating, in Cameron County, Texas, the ears are setting on the stalks when the lowa farmer is planting his crop. Singar cane, as is generally known, is grown by planting the stalks themselves in furrows, but this does not have to be done every year. In the planting will last for eight or ten years. Another point: Rio-Grando cane contains about thirty per cent.

more singar than that of other localities. It was this fact that won the

The Evolved Product of Centuries of

The Evolved Product of Centuries of Invention.

The point of a needle is a very important part of that useful little instrument, and there are many points about needles calculated to interest the general public. The daily consumption of needles all over the world is something like 3,000,000, while every year the women of the United States break, lose and use some 300,000,000,000,000 of those tiny tools. Few people while threading a needle have ever given a thought to the various processes through which the wire mast—pass—before—it—comes—out—a needle. Yet the manufacture of needles includes some 21 different processes from cutting the wire and threading the double needles by the eyes to separating the two needles on the one length of wire, heading, hard-ening in oil, cleaning out the sides of the eye, point-setting, and final polishing. For wrapping purple paper is used, since it prevents rusting. There are many sorts of needles for surgeons', cooks', glovenakers', weavers', sallmakers', broommahers', milliners and dressmakers' used, since it prevents in the evolved product of centuries of invention. In its primitive form it was made of bone, lvory, or wood. Point by point 18; manufacture has improved, until this little but not insignificant instrument is now one of the highlystnished products of twenticth ceniury machinery and skill.—Zion's Herald.

What is Boone county doing in the matter of contributing money with which to assist in making a creditable showing for Kentucky at the Jamestown Exposition? Her prorata has been designated and is a very small eum when her population is considered. The counties of Kenton, Grant and Gallatin have made good the amounts they were requested to contribute and Boone cannot allow these neighbors to do better than she will do.

Hit With a Boulder

Hit With a Boulder.

A bad and what came very nearly being a serious case of insubordination developed in the Burlington eelered school, one day last week,
The teacher, who is a woman, diarceted one of the pupils, a boy about 10 years old, to do something that did not exactly suit him, and when she turned her back, he threw a rock at her, striking her behind a one ear. She went down like she was shot, and it was some time betore she recovered from the blow.
Circumstances indicate that the boy had equipped himself for the attack on the teacher, and that the teacher is alive and the boy not in jail charged with murder, is owing antirely to good luck. While the pupils in both the white and colored schools in Burlington have acquired a reputation of being bad and hard to govern, this is the first case of violence, and one of which such an example should be made that the like will not occur again.

Of and for the People.

Of one thing there is no doubt—Kentucky's women are the most beautiful. The Courier-Journal has taken upon itself the pleasant duty of proving this. The people are as much interested in this contest as the paper itself; in fact, it is a contest of and for the people. But, above all things, it is the duty of loyal Kentuckians to support their claim to having in their midst the world's most beautiful women. Here is a chance to prove it for all time to come, and to wipe out everlastingly the claim of arrogant Chicago. Send in photographs beginning today. Do not feel that it is either too early or too late to send them in. The contest will be made thorough before it is finally decided, and the beautiful woman you have in mind may be the one the Jury of Awards will think the most beautiful. Then if you know anyother, send her photographs to the Editor of the Beauty Contest, care The Courier-Journal, Louisville, Ky. Rural Mail Routes.

Several of the ladies gave an oyster supper last Saturday night purely for the fun (?) there is in such undertakings. The patrons had all the soup they wanted with crackers, pickles, sandwiches and coffee. The charge for the supper was small, being only sufficient to pay for the material used in its preparation. About 40 personswere fed. After supper the occasion was converted into a charade party, which furnished enjoyment for quite a number of persons until nearly 11 o'clock.

"Manners Mayketh Men."

The North American Review discourses upon 'the improvement in American manners, declaring that though the change is not marked, it is of the gradual character that makes for permanence. The Review says: 'It is not true, as declared in the form of mototees upon the walls of a famous boys' school in Engiand, that 'unanners make the men, but they help; and, much as we may despise them as a mere outer garment und superficial soul-covering, we cannot ignore the fact that they are still vital conditions of social intercourse, and afford much of the charm still vital conditions of social inter-course, and afford much of the charm without which existence would be unendorable. Desautiful manners are as capitivating as a beaufull face or hand or form, and, unlike these, may be acquired. To be born and bred well is a great blessing, but it is not necessary to chide Fortune, as Shake-speare titl, for not having provided better for his life. cus which public manners

Than public means which public manners breed.

Sauvily and gentleness cost only a little self-restraint and a little thought now and then, and yet they not only occasion much pleasure to others, but save ourselves much of the tunuit and ugliness and embroilment of life. Lincky, indeed, is that deservedly popular woman, American born and English bred, who once said to us, 'Tam always polite because it is so much trouble to be rude.' After all, we cannot be very much better than our manners, any more than our reaches can surpass our taste, but it may be that goodness can be developed in the linner consciousness by outer conditions. At any 1922, 'Tablegg one weman who smiles continueusly because she firmly believes that, if she persistently wears the expression of harmon the conditions are mable to preceive a very considerable change—as yet, and we must admit frankly that we could not endure for long an unyielding smite; and yet where no doubt that content of the persistently wears the expression of harmon the continueusly because the content of the persistently wears the expression of harmon the content of the persistently wears the expression of harmon the content of the persistently wears the expression of harmon the persistent of the persistently wears the expression of harmon the persistent of the persi endure for long an unytelding smile and yet we have no doubt that con-siderate manners would in time tend to the development of a suavity and gentleness of which some of us still stand somewhat in need."

Revival in Mural Painting.

Revival in Mural Painting.

In our revival of mural painting we have had much to learn. The larger number of our painters were not scherwise conjuped for the work than by the pessession of technical ability of draw and paint the human figure on the scale of life or larger, and all the other manifold conditions of executing an acceptable decoration they were obliged to acquire. Small wonder fall, therefore, remarks Will H. Low in Seribner's Magazine, that in these few years the expressional quality of our painters' work should have suffered in their effort to meet these new technical conditions. Nor has the fault been entirely that of the painters, for all others concerned, the architects and building committhe painters, for any observable to the architects and building committees, have shown equal indifference, and in none of the public buildings thus far decorated has there beed drawn up a definite scheme of themes to be treated, nor any allotment made of their various parts to different artists. In some cases the painters have organized themselves Into a semi-biance of such a committee, but if a definite project has ever been devised it has never been carried out to the avoidance of repetition of subject, avoldance of repetition of subject within the building, or, as in on-case, on the walls of the same room

Only Millionaires Wanted.
Unfortunately, tinder present conditions the highest appointments in our diplomatic service are of necessity almost restricted to millionaires, simply because men of moderate means cannot afford to accept them. It is a fact well known, says Rene Bache in Lippineott's, that John C. New refused the English mission a few years ago, on the ground that it would rulfi Lim financially, accepting instead the place of consul general in London, which paid him $35,000 a year, with so incidental obligation to entertain expensively. To shew honor to Alice Roosevelt Longworth and her hubsand a few months ago. Whitchaw Reid spent a sum equal to his salary for a twelvemonth ($17,500) on festivities covering two days. It was an exceptional case, of coarse, but even the ordinary social demands upon—an ambassador make a frightful drain apon his purse.

That New York woman who con-fessed that she lived partly on the sum of money allowed her by her hus-band and partly by borrowing from her friends was unique only in the re-spect that she was frank enough to admit the truth.

In the undience were representatives of a prominent woman's organization which has been active in circulating and having presented petitions of remonstrance against Mr. Smoot.

These women secured many thousands of signatures to their petitions, which were sent to the senaté in elaborately bound volumes.

There has been numerous speeches made for and against Senator Smoot since the resolution to unseat him was reported from the committee of privileges and elections, just prior to the adjournment of Congress last year.

Wednesday Senators Dublis, Hansbrough, Newlands, Bacon and Burrows, the latter chairman of the committee, spoke against Smoot, while Senators Beereldge, Dollive and Foraker spoke in his support.

Mr. Foraker spoke briefly in Smoot's behalf, but his able exposition of the Morman appost's case in the mimority report of the privileges and elections committee, presented last June, sowed the seed that developed into a complete vindication of Snoot.

Origin of "Helpmeet."

"Helpmeet." has had a curlous history which began with the biblical account of the creation, when "the Lord God said, it is not good that the man should be alone: I will make him an help meet for him." That is to say, a fit assistant. But the two words hove become curlously combined into a "helpmeet," and they are constantly used as one. Moreover, the confusion is increased by the corruption of the words into "helpmate," and Macaulay writes of the waiting woman whe was "generally considered as the most suitable help mate for a parson."

INGTON. . . . KENTUCKY.

It is no mere sentimentalism to say that men should learn to think more of what is due from them to others than of what is due from them to others than of what is due from them to others than of what is due from others to them. This is the charch idea. It is the like a list of all who have greatly served mankind. The real heroes of schence never were moved in any degree by the thought of the "recompress of reward." Parifols, if they mare tauly narrieds, were inspired by no such motive. Washington refused to receive one cent of salary for commanding the constituents armies. His idea was that he should do something for his country, not that his country should do something for him. Father Damien, who went to minister to the iepers, and who died a martry, looked on himself is a clave to duty and to his brothers who were in uffliction and misery. When we think of such men as these, and remember how the world has got forward by the self-sacrifices of men and women, does not our passionate stringle for what we call our rights forward by the self-sacrifices of men and women, does not our passionate siringdie for what we call our rights seem just a little vulgar? We fight so hard to get what we think we ought to have—when perhaps we ought not to have it at all—and rebel so fiercely against the withholding or withdrawal of supposed blessings! That is all very natural, of course, and

of mind which prompts men to serve others rather than themselves,

That is all very natural, of course, and yet, remarks the Indianapolis News, there is a more natural—hecause a mobler—habit of mind. It is that habit

Our Indian Population.

The figures showing the Indian population in the United States do not afford much ground for sentimental persons to lament the disappearance of 'Lo.' As a matter of fact, the indians are not disappearing, so far as numbers are concerned. There are now nearly 300,000 members of the aboriginal races in this country, and there is a steady growth. As it is doubtful whether there were ever any more in this portion of the continent, it is possible that much emotion has been wasted in deploring the passing of these original inhabitants. Furthermore, the Indians of the present day are in far better condition than their progenitors. Many are educated and trained in ways that make them good and worthy citizens, and they live in a uanner that would astonish the red—man of 200 years ago, could he come—back and see things as they are now.' More than halt the Indians in existence dress like white men and to some extent copy civilized ways. The other ence dress like white men and to some xtent copy civilized ways. The other half retain much of the old-time mode of living, but the proportion of "blan-ket" or wholly uncivilized redskins is steadily growing smaller.

Mrs. Gougar is right, remarks the Indianapolis News. in saying that equal suffrage sentiment is growing year by year, in so far at least as replates to municipal affairs. Probably a majority of intelligent and liberal-minded men are now ready to admit that women who pay taxes, women interested in schools and in the social order—a list that includes a majority of the women in any community. of the women in any community-should have a voice in the regulation shound have a voice in the regulation of local affairs. Men will not vote to grant such a change, however, until women unmistakably manifest their wish for it, and this they have not yet done, since they are slower to adopt progressive ideas than men.

An effort is being made in New York to moderate the noises of civilization. Maybe the day will come when noise will not continue to he identified with progress, and quiet with a state of incrtia. In fact, if noise increases at its present ratio, and this desired reform does not materialize, life is in danger of becoming one long, loud scream.

A clerk in Work robbed hir employ yer of $600 and then confessed the theft, but instead of prosecuting him the latter retained him in his employ and raised his salary. Still, this case should not be taken as one for general emulation. There are not many employers who would take such a mild hist 2a just that way.

The argument in favor of the aboli tion of the Cariisic Indian school is that the places for instructing the red-akins should be located a little closer to their reservations. «Carlisic's friends might well reply that it is better to have the school as far away as possible from the reservations.

She was unable to give minute details of the shooting, as she was too overcome by the excitement of the moment.

The trial lagged somewhat at the afternoor, session, the defense calling only two witnesses, Mrs. Edward L. Gaines a sister, and F. Strouther, a hother of Mrs. Bywaters. Judge Harrison, with a view of expediting the trial, ordered the courtroom cleared.

She declared that Bywaters' indifference to her sister maddemed her (the witness), and "when he openely ridiculed Vlola's condition" she turned on him, declaring: "You are the lowest dog that ever lived."

Her husband added: "Well, Bywaters, you have violated every obligation of an Odd Fellow and a man of honor." The sting carried by her husband's (Mr. Galnes) bitter denuncition of her sister's betrayer, Mrs. Gaines stated, almost provoked an encounter between Bywaters and Mr. counter between Bywaters and Mr Gaines, which was only averted by Bywaters going to Vlola's bedroom.

Well, I finished threshing yeasterday and received from it an avorage of 43½ bushels per acre—testing, 64½ pounds per stroked bushel. The wheat is the best sample I have ever nafted—so uniform and even in size. You may know it was a good sample when I tell you that I have already sohl 2,000 bushels of it for seed to my selephors. This year has been my best effort in farming during my Ille. My wheat totaled 9,230 bushels and my oats nearly 5,000.

If you remember I polated out to you a half section lying just west of your house and joining my upper quarter on the south, which I said I should have in order to make one of the best farms in western Chanada. I sam very glid to be able to reli you that I now own that half section. My smiddlinnow is to be able to market 23,000 bushels of wheat next year. If somethes we have been with me during the last two weeks and could have seen the poblic my my granaries. This year I proved to my neighbor that the Hoosicro, when once "woke up," can raise graits equal to the best Minnesota farmera. His best yield was 42½ bushels per acre, so you see "old Indiana" is holding the ribbon this year.

The work for those who would make changes must therefore be done decently and in order, and the proposed new laws must be so surely of advantage and necessary that almost none will question them. The great mass of the people have more to lose by stretching the constitution than they would gain by the new Republican doctrine of expediency, for who can say that the disintegration and annihilation of law that would ensue would not lead to air end of free government? Let us therefore be patient of the ills we have that we may not suffer from still greater ones that we know not of.

Standpatters in Straits.

The trust barons, who are now so highly protected, may obtain still higher rates under the proposed maximum and minimum tariff, which would give them s further monopoly of the home market and would surely result in still higher prices for manufactured products, because even the little competition from abroad, which we now enjoy, would be effectually cut off. That woold? increase the oost of living still more and make it more difficult to compete in foreign-conarties with our products, and apparently the zone plan is to overcome the partial annihilation of our foreign trade that the prohibitive tariff of other countries is likely to cause. As Secretary Shav in high in the councils of the standmarters his new plan is perhaps a new scheme of the protectionists to add to the tariff taxes the American people now pay by creating free zones for the benefit of the trusts and the foreigner and maximum rates for us. It is also evident that under the Shaw plan, instead of the foreigner paying the tax as the protectionists have tried to make us believe they do, the American people not only pay the tariff tax but the expense of keeping up the free zones and the increased profits on trust preducts which the tariff protects them in charging in the homemarket. Does not all this indicate that the protective system is breaking down of its own weight and that its votaries are at their wits end to contrep plans to keep their hold on foreign markets, which they find slipping away from them, through the retailing tion of other countries against our high tariff? How long will the people continue to submit to this trust and corporation pluudering under the guise of law?

The petition demands, in addition to the calling of a special session immediately after March 4, that the subject of maximum and minimum tariff be considered as a basis for reciprocity with other nations; it also significantly declares. In all cases of tariff revision the test should be, not, is such a duty demanded, but its such a duty needed?" Nor is Massachusetts the only state whose legislature is demanding reform, for the Oregon legislature wants the tariff on jute bass—45 per cent—tariff on lunber—15 to 44 per cent—abolished.

Will be Aided by Woman's Sufrage Success, Asserts Miss Clay,
Lexington. Although defeated temporarily, she said woman suffrage would finally triumph in the new state. She believes one of the great political parties will be compelled shrough the need of votes to help woman's cause, and the women will in return lend their support to that party.

At a recent meeting of the Southern Women's Rights society at Memphis, Miss Clay says, it was brought out by the cessis of 1990 that there were 500.000 more white women and men than negro women and men in the south, and that if the white women in the south, and that if the white women in the south, were given an opportunity to vote the question of the race problem would be settled through the ballot.

THE STORY.

THE STORY.

WHEN the little buby girl eame lints that home in Ephraim and was nauced behoral the parents little realized the future that lay before her. In the first place there was disappointment befores she the lirst born child, was not a boy, and then again she was not a tomely child, in fact, so distorted seemed the features that her mother found no foy in looking upon her face. And to make the affliction harder—to bear, the unusually ugly features of the child save her neighbors and the towns people oceasien to speak words of oldicule and secon. For because she and her husband had remained true in the layer of the high and would not share in the festivities which had been instituted in their midst they were the objects of derivation and persecution. "Now see the curse that has come

And this was the atmosphere in which Deborah grew up, a condition which at once stamped its influence upon the child and made her naturally a recluse like her parents.

Long before the liftle ligit lows able to run upon the street people as they passed the little home would mark her homely features and whisper unkind comment. The mother, keen to catch a critical glance and the whispered word, would class her darling closer to her breast and whisper in her ear the pet words of love and appreciation. And when Deborah grew old enough to mingle with the children of the neighborhood she early became conscious of—a difference between her and the other girls. They seemed to shun her. They would plott at her and make grimaces. And often as she passed along the street of the village the boys and girls would shout after her calling her names.

Then Deborsh, shy and sonstitute.

out her grief in her ear. It such times the mother would say to her that she could have a comely face. That God dooked on the heart rather' than the outward appearance. And then she would go no to tell her of the Hebrew God and the wonderful things he had done for his people, and Decorah w. It was a proper and the grown of the Hebrew God and the wonderful things he had done for his people, and Decorah w. It was a proper and the great for the stories of God and the world without, and was never so happy as when sitting at her mother told her. She withdrew from the world without, and was never so happy as when sitting at her mother told her. She withdrew from the world without, and was never so happy as when sitting at her mother's knee hearing the stories of God and his dealings with the children of Abraham.

And then as she would go abroad, as her duties often required, and she would see the wickedness about her, the worship of the idols and the induffences in the heathen festivities, she would rush back to the refuge of her own home and question her imother about it, asking, over and over again:

"Oh, mamma, how can they forget God so? How can they be so weked?"
And then the mother would go over the history of the children of Israel Gagain, and shew her how repeatedly they had wandered away from home, and how at last they had been brought back to him.

Thus the years passed and Deboraty free wind womanhood. Still there were the distorted features, but with the development of years and the growing near to God, there had come a subduling influence over the irregular, harsh lines of the face. No one who looked into those deep, serious eyes and saw them light up, as she talked concerning the things of God; no one who heard the wonderful depth and fullness of the face. No one who looked into those deep, serious eyes and saw them light up as she talked concerning the things of God; no one who heard the wonderful depth and fullness of the face. No one who looked into those deep, serious eyes and saw them light up as s

"Oh, if some one would only tell the people of their sin." Deborah excelaimed, after she had related to her mother the sad scene.

"And why do not you?" asked her mother, with sudden inspiration.
"Me, mother," Deborah exclaimed, shrinking back at the Hought. "How could ?"

Nothing more was said but her mother's words. "Why de not you?" kept ringing in her cars, until at last she exclaimed to herself:

"I will! 4 will just tell them of God's leading in the past. Of the past shis of the people and how God has she exclaing in the past. Of the past shis of the people and how God has punished them. Of the present wick-edness and how surely God will visit affliction upon them if they do not turn from evil was and serve the living God."

And Deborah kept her resolve, and not many days after this her name was on every one's lips as the one who had fearlessly store the one who had fearlessly store the sins of the people and pleaded with them to turn back to God. Now one of those who had listened to be belovah's message in the market place was a man of Mount Ephraim named Lapidoth. His spirit was stirred within him at the words he heard and when the king had refused to let Deborah speak further in the market place he offered her shelter shown as a landwark was a landwark will be place to effered her shelter for the refused to let Lapidoth, and the place where she dwelt became known as like place of the plant rice of Deborah, for there the beautiful great tree reared its tall head to the sky and was a landwark by which the people were guided to her dwelling. And hither the people resorted to her for instruction and judgment, and as the affliction of the children of Israel to the second the second who was hone and many learn of the second plant of war whom she called to her aid, and the place and nightly man of war whom she called to her aid, she delivered lerael and judged them for many years.

Both Cured by Poison Oak—Both Cured by Cutlcura.

"Last year, after having my little girl treated by a very prominent physician for an obstinate case of eczema, I resorted to the Cutlcura Remedies, and was so well pleased with the almost instantaneous relief afforded that we discarded the physician's prescription and relied entirely on the Cutlcura Song, Cuticura Ointment, and Cutlcura Pills. When we conmenced with the Cutlcura Remedies her feet and limbs were covered with running sores. In about six weeks we had her completely well, and there has been no recurrence of the trouble.

"In July of this year a little boy in our family poisoned his hands and arms with poison oak, and in twenty-four hours his hands and arms with poison oak, and in twenty-four hours his hands and arms with the Cutlcura Remedies, washing his hands and annisting them with the Cutlcura Remedies, we him the Cutlcura Resolvent. ### ROBIN RED BREAST A FRAUD.

Bird Famed in Song and Story Declared Much Overrated.

The horticulturist put down his paper and smorted in disgust when he read an article praising robins. "The robin is a much overrated bird," he said. "People rail against the English sparrow, but he doesn't begin to torment the gardener as the robin does. Did you ever hear of a robin esting insects? No, indeed, not one little bug does he eat; but he'll puil up all the worms in the soil and impoverish if, for angle worms are the natural enrichers of the soil. His appetite is enormous, and it won't take him long to eigen out all the angle worms are the natural enrichers of the soil. His appetite is enormous, and it won't take him long to eigen out all the angle worms in a good, piot of-earth.

"His also recus on berries, and I won't forget in a hurry what he did to me last winter. I planted a lot of black aider trees in my grounds, andicipating that by Christmas they would be plazing with red berries. You know the black aider is called the morthern holly and its berries are a wivid searlet. Well, just as soon as the berries began to form a swarm of robins swooped down and gobbled them all up. How did they happen to be up north? Why, robins would stay aroth—all, winter if they could find enough herries to eat. They don't under hool weather any. It's simply a matter of food that drives them to a warmer clinate. Bitter-sweet berries are the only sort they won't eat. They're robbers, too. They'll steal the nests of such little birds as the phoebe that sing sweetly. And they haven't ab it of common sense. When they teach their young to fly they keep up such a squawking that they story is after and pounce on the young birds. Most horticulturists will tell you that the robin is a fraud and is no pet of gardeners. Even his name is a deception, for his much vaunted red breast is a y-cilowish brown. I welcome the sparrow around my place much more cordially than I-do-the-fat robin."

ney Stung to Death the Poultry on the Farm and Buzzed for More.

From Cape Town comes the following: A very large number of turkers, gresse, ducks, fowls and chickens were recently killed in the Stellenboach districts in a unique manner. A few days ago several bives of bees on Mr. Choefe's farm, kingmuts, which had been there for a higher of years, were attacked by what is known in the Dutchi language as the motbil, presumably with the object of eating the honey.

In consequence of this it appears the bees showed theiry reseatment by attacking all the poultry on the farm and practically annihilated the lot. They further assailed the farmer and his men, who had a rough afternoon, struggling to gain the victory over the bees. It is said that one of the colored gomestic servants was unrecognizable after the engagement.

It was fortunate that the cattle and horses were in the velid, otherwise things might have been more serious. In the evening everything became more normal, when the bees were smoked out with sulphur and exterminated. It is said that on the serious which the residents of the farm had on that day they do not wish to have repeated. A struggle with infuriated bees is a most awful and painful experience.

SOME WIVES ARE DIFFERENT.

Quiet Cynicism, or Good Honest Row -Which is the Better?

"Most men," said the man of experience, "think it must be awfully nice to have a wife who takes things as coolly as Dave Potter's wife takes them; but others more discriminating, prefer a good honest row to her siyle of quiet cynicism. The way she behaved the other day when she found a letter in Dave's pocket from a girl is an example of her method. "I don't see," wrote this girl, how on earth I causever live without you." Dave's wife read that gush, and a lot more just like it, without ever turning a halr.
"Well," she said, quietly, that girl is a rool. If she knew you as well as I do she would be wondering how on earth she could ever live with you." "And that, in the opinion of the discriminating few, cuts a whole lot deeper than a common, everyday rumpus."

Known Excellence and Quality and of Known Component Parts.

To gain the full confidence of the Well-Informed of the world and the approval of the most eminent physicians, it is essential that the component parts be known to and approved by them, and, therefore, the California Fig Syrup Company has published for many years past in its advertisements and upon every package a full statement thereof. The perfect purity and uniformity of product which they demand in a laxative remedy of an ethical character are assured by the California Fig Syrup Company's original method of manufacture, known to the Company only.

There are other ethical remedies approved by physicians, but the product of the California Fig Syrup Company possesses the advantage over all other family laxatives that it cleanses, sweetens and relieves the internal organs on which it acts, without disturbing the natural functions or any debilitating after effects and without having to increase the quantity from time to time.

This valuable remedy has been long and favorably known under the name of Syrup of Figs, and has attained to world-wide acceptance as the most excellent of family laxatives, and as its pure laxative principles, obtained from Senna, are well-known to physicians and the Well-Informed of the world to be the best of natural laxatives, we have adopted the more elaborate name of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, as more fully descriptive of the remedy, but doubtlessly it will always be called for by the shorter name of Syrup of Figs; and to get its beneficial effects, always note, when purchasing, the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Of Figs or by the full name, Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, as Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, as Syrup of Figs or by the full name, Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, as Syrup of Figs or by the full name, Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, as Syrup of Figs, which has given satisfaction to millions. A few days ago the colored woman, Mary Bush, who is teaching the colored school near 1dde wild, had occasion to use the rod on two of her pupils for fighting on the play grounds. One of the pupils was the son of Abe Slater and wife, who became so incensed at the proceedings that they visited the school house, and during the argument with the teacher the mother of the Slater boy got hold of a broom stick with which she gave the teacher a heavy blow on the head. F I between the art divine
That glorifies the dead,
What comfort then can I call mine,
What solace seek instead?
For from my birth our country's fame
Was life to me, and love;
And for each loyal Irish name
Some garland still I wove,

I'd rather be the bird that sings Above the martyr's grave,
Than fold in fortune's case my wings
And feel my soul a slave;
I'd rather turn one simple verse
True to the Gaelle ear
Than sapplie odes I might rehearse
With senates listening near.

Oh, native iand: dost ever mark,
When the world's din is drowned
Beiwixt the daylight and the dark,
A wandering solemn sound
That on the western wind is borne Across thy dewy breast?
It is the voice of those who mourn
For thee, in the far west.

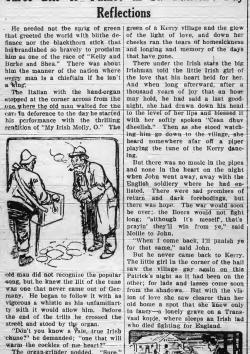

For them-and theirs I oft essay Thy ancient art of song, And often sadly turn away, Deceming my rashness wrong; For well I ween, a loving will Is all the art I own. Ah met could love suffice for skill, What triumphs I had known!

My native land! My native land! My native land: My native land:
Live ln my memory still!
Break on my brain, ye surges grand!
Stand up, mist-covered hill!
Still on the mirror of the mind
The scenes I love, I see;
Would I could fly on the western wind,
My native land, to thee!

old man did not recognize the popular song, but he knew the lift of the tune was one that never came out of Germany. He began to follow it with as vigorous a whistle as his unfamiliarity with it would allow him. Before the end of the trills he crossed the street and stood by the organ. "Don't you know a Yale, true Irish chune?" he demanded; "one that will warn-lie cockles of me heart?" The organ-grinder nodedd. "Sure," he smiled. And, first with a wheeze and, then with an operatic run, he started the tune that brought the hat from the head of the old man. "Play it again," he commanded, when the air was done. And again and still again did the Italian play it while the old man stood uncovered. "I always take off me hat to 'The Wearin' o' the Green." "He warin' o' the Green." "He said. "Old man Gilligan gave me a bit o' real shamrock this mornin' that his daughter had sent him from Tipperay." The old man took out a waitet and caressingly touched the bit of green that was folded within. "Play it again," he ordered when the grinder stopped. And in the last chorus his quavering old volce rang out with all the loyalty and the devotion of the esturies of the fighting race, "But till that day, praise God, 171 stick by the wearin' o' the green."

risi Are Attainable.

A black and white shepherd check, all-wool, plaited skirt, which was hopelessly solied and badly spotted, was successfully cleaned by immersing at light in a bath-tub of cold water, to which had been added a small cake of tory soap, first shaved, cooked to a lelly in boiling water and two teapoonfuls of borax. Next morning this water, which was very dirty, was gray of the same temperature. This was drawn off, and the skirt was soused up and down in clean, clear water of same temperature. This was drawn off and followed by two more rinse waters, taking care to have all of same temperature. No rubbing. The skirt was then hung out of doors on the line without wringing at all, in a warm, sunny place, and in six hours was perfectly dry, and so smooth as to scarcely need pressing. It was pressed under a damp cloth, however, and looked like new.

This mothod is equally successful with white wooten materials. Nothing will fade and run even in cold coapsuda, and one should try a piece before washing anything about which there is and uncertainty.

Annie had hoped that they would not weep, forsure, wasn't it bad luck to have tears when one was going home?

Cupid Cakes.

Take three eggs and their weight in butter, in sugar and in four; then cream the butter and sugar until very light and creamy; add one-fourth teaspoontial of salt and and one-haif each teaspoontial of vanilia and almond extracts; then add the eggs one at a time and beat five minutes between each addition; then add all the flour, folding it in lightly; pour the mixture into a greased pan, filling with the batter three-quarters full and using a shallow sheet pan. For the Table.

In stead_of vases or bowls for flowers that afe to ornament the dinner table the rustic pleces made of silver are pretty, as well as practical. These are made in various shapes and forms, and are really several small vases rising from the same base, the whole made to represent a cluster of branches from a tree.

The rough bark is well reproduced in the silver and the different little branches are, of course, of frregular heights and of different sizes.

The effect when each branch or, rather, vase, is filled with long-stemmed flowers is extremely beautiful and the center-plece is delicate and dainty in appearance, without seeming small or insignificant.

To Disinfect Book.

To disinfect a book which has been in the sick, room wash the cover with some good purifier and put the book out in the open air for one day, where the sun can beat down upon it with all force. One of the best disinfectants is the black or crude carbolic acid. For each drain, basin or bathtub, pour down one tablespondrul, then with boiling water cleanse out the pipe. In all cases of sewer gas this will prove an excellent purifier and give to any bouse or apartment a heathy dow. This hint is especially intended for those who live in town, but country dwellers will find it uses

Spaghetti Rabbit.

Boil a quarter of a pound of spaghetti, ribase and chop fine. Beat two eggs, put in a saucepan with two tablespoonfuls of cream, a little salt, dash of pepper and a half pound of chopped cheese. Stir over a slow fire until the cheese begins to melt. Add the spaghetti and stir until the cheese is entirely melted, then serve quickly on thin toasted bread. This is a good hot supper dish.

The alranger cannot perhaps more castly set a single slimues of the true and ancient Spain than by acquiring the balts of traveling third class. The cast, indeed, are hard, but the company is assually excellent, charming in manners, and not oftensive to any sense. Here a constant series of novel lottings is presented to the traveler, who, may quietly study them at lesure. Perhaps if is a dozen merry girls on their way to a festival, packed tightly together and faden with packages; some, the more sedate among them, wear mantillas, some bright handkeychiefs on their heads, or go with their hair uncovered; but, nowwer they are dressed, to whatever they are dressed and they are all clean and sweet.

Ot, perhaps it is a less crowded carrighte one enters; there are two middle class Spaniards and a peasant group of three; a fat, folly, middle-aged man in a peasant's costume, but clean and new, atmost stylish; a woman of like age—one of those free, robus, kindly women whom Spain produces so often; and a pretty, bare-headed girl, evidently her daughter, though the man seems a friend or relative who is escorting them on their sourcey. By and by, when we have been some hours on our journey, he lifts from the seat in front of him the large, heavy, embroidered wallet—the alforia which Sancho Pansa was always so aratious to keep well filled—unwinds if and draws out one of the great, flat, delicious Spaniar hoaves and throws it on the woman's lap. Then a dish of a tewed meat appears, and the bread is cut into slices which serves ap plates for the meat. But before the ment is begun. On registant trans, round with a heavity "Gusta?" It is the invitation to share in the feast, which every polite Spaniard must make even to strangers who happen to be present, and it is as a matter of course politely refused from the wallet and the meal. The Power of Man.

Hage gon any idea of what is meant by the abysical power of man? Ask the efficials of the English prisons, where convicts are required to operate she treadmill. Estimate how many pounds are lifted an hour by the dweed sportsman who shoots a pigeoda with a seven-pound gun, Give a wordmann a fine-pound ax on a tenday fibs in the Adirondacks and reck on the number of limes he raises that of the busy typewriter, capacity the word as a minute? Each hand weights a pound (speaking of man now, not the dainty little flippers of womankind), and counting each mover of a merca of four letters we can figure out a movement, figure out a movement of 450 times a minute, 24,000 times an hour, and 192,000 times an hour, and 192,000 times an awarking day of eight hours, which is to say he lifts 193,000 pounds with both hands in a day of eight hours.

Worth Knowing About.

If you need a first-class laxative, there is nothing better nor safer than that old family remedy, Brandreth's Pills. Bach pill contains one grain of solid extract of sarsaparilia, which, with other valuable vegetable products, make it a blood nutiter of excellent character. If you are troubled with constipation, one pill at night will afford great relief.

Brandreth's Pills are the same fine laxative tonic pill your grandparents used. They have been in use for over a century, and are for sale everywhere, either plain or sugar-coated.

Kilts vs. Trousers.

A Scot has written for the London journals an argument in favor of vearing kilts, capecially in cold weather. A fashlonable physician of Loudon supports his argument, and the Tailor and Cutter admits that the streets would be made more picturesque, furthermore the kilt would put an end to "baggy-kneed trousers." A pair of trousers that bag at the knees is indeed a loathsome object. The question of wearing kilts is not one of leg exposure to the cold of winter, nor is it one of comparative durability and economy it material. It is chiefly a question of legs, remarks Boston Heraid. The Pealmete sald of the Lord: "He taketh not pleasure in the legs of a man." Nevertheless, civilized faman, a vain thing, vainer than the average woman, is conscious of his legs. They must be sculptured if the kitt is to be donned. "Thackeray's marquis of Flarintosh appeared at Parisian court balls in his uniform of the Scotch archers or in his native Glienlivat tartan, and he thought there was no handsomer young nobleman; but look at Doyle's picture of him, to look at Doyle's picture of him, but look at Doyle picture of him, but look at was no handsomer young nobleman; but look at Doyle's picture of him but look at Doyle's picture of him, and lo, he was a sight. We may all be deceived in this respect. The most bow-legged may fondly imagine that his left at least is a poem. There are eminent statesmen, judges, phil-anthropists who, kitted, would supear as inconsiderable beings, things of naught, yet they may rise superior to baggy trousers or even to those worn at half-mast.

He explored the Delta, the deserts, the region between the Nile and the Red sea; he learned Arabic, and soon—became so accilimated that Africa seemed his real home—a paradise compared to Europe, with its "wretched, insufferable civilization." Thus it was that he felt himself dayan deeper and deeper into the Dark continent. His "Heart of Africa" appeared in 1874, and was promptly translated into all the European languages. His inter-works attracted less attention, as they were addressed chiefly to savants. In recent years he has devoted much time to the preparation of charts of the Eastern desert. of Egypt. The latest count showed that of the cabs of all kinds, 7,713 altogether, 502 were automobiles. All of these are in such great demand that-their-receipts often rise to 315 a day, and never fall below five dollars. They are allowed to charge seven cents more than ordinary calza. The number of auto-omnibuses was 947, as against 3,313 street_cars. These pminbuses make almost ab good time as the auto-cabs. Accidents rarely happen, largely owing to the abundant supply of policemen. At the Potsdamer Platz alone there are 14-16 them, and they have there are 14 of them, and they have very little to do, their mere presence making the drivers and areful to observe the ordinances.

Washington, March 7.—The executive branch of the government has abandance all hope of fading any concessions which it can offer the Freuch government to prevent the application of the maximum tariff rates on American products not specifically exempted therefrom by existing arrangements. Officially it is stated that the situation as to France is therefore a similar one to that as to Germany in neither one to that as to Germany in neither case can this government at present meet the demand for a reciprocity treaty as the price of minimum tariff rates for American goods and products. Through their embassies at Washington the governments of the two countries named have been made aware of this fact, and also that it remains for congress to decide whether it cares to divert these blows at the American export trade by approving reciprocity treaties with France and Germany. In the case of France the state department is concentrating its efforts upon the subjects of the live catte and dressed meats trade.

The French government has declined to accept as sufficient the rigorous examination and precautions against the shipment of unfit cattle and meats provided for in the pure food act and the regulations of the department of agriculture.

Instead it persists in demanding the certificate of microscopical examination provided for by the old law and regulation, and it is the purpose of the state -department to convince the French people that the new plan is very much better and safer. The Italian government has given notice that it is satisfied with the new inspection system, and that fact is beling used as an argument to influence favorably the French government. But as to general exports, there is little to be done by the state department, and it is said there is no ground for protest against the projected increase of the French dutes on American products for protective reasons.

In fact that very aftermoon his father had urged him to remain to the festival which was being arranged for the day after the morrow, for it was hoped by this recognition and worship of the heathen gods that they might win the favor of the nations about them, and secure relief from the hardships they had been forced to endure. But Gidson manfully with stood the pleading of his father, asyling:

As a matter of fact, do you do anything to help locally, or do you merely take the money out of a community, returning nothing whatever, beyond the value of the roods bought? Thinks the it over carefully, I believe it is

MENTER T. GRAVES.

Menter Thompson Craves was born December 2, 1837, enlisted in the Confederate army in 1862, was married in 1890, joined Builitiss burg Baptist church in 1890, and died March 2, 1907. The above is a brief biography of M. T. Graves, whose departure is mourned by all who knew him. He was a good citizen a brave soldier, and a loving and kind husband. He was a son of the late Joseph C. Graves whose wife was a daughter of Robert Kirtley, who, eixty years 1800, and who was the most popular Baptist minister in this part of Kentucky, When the war between the State broke out Menter Graves cast his lot with the South, and enlisted in the Confederate army in 1862, from which time until the close of the war he did active service at the front. When he came home from the army he began farming, which pursuit he followed the remainder of his days. His wife was Miss Martha Grant, who, with one daughter, Miss Carrie, survive. The funeral services were conducted by Dr. Skillman at Bullitt-burg Baptist church, in the presence of a very large concourse of friends and relatives, after which the remains were consigned to their last recting place in the beautiful little city of the dead near the church, where the ashes of so many of his kindred repose.

As Craig Baldon was attempting to come home, last Saturday evening, from Andersan's Ferry in a buggy, when near Thomas Rouse's, between Burlington and Hebron, the harness broke and the horse walked out of the shafts, leaving Craig and the vehicle in a sea of mud. Craig put the lap cover on the horse and rode it home, leaving the buggy in the road until next day.

The Rabbit Hash-Waterloo-Belleview pike is making very satisfactory progress, be it said to the credit of those who are pushing it along. They have passed the danger line and will keep the preliminary work moving until they are ready to make the dirf fly. The completion of that road will mark the beginning of a new epoch in the history of the section of courty that will be benefitted by it.

CIRCUIT JUDGE B. F. MENEFEE Stricken with Appendicitis,

Circuit Judge B. F. Menefee, of Circuit Judge B. F. Menefee, of Crittenden, was stricken with appendicitie on Tuesday of last week. The attack was so severe that his family physician had him taken to a Cincinnati hospital forthwith, and he was operated on last Friday, since which time he has suftered considerably, but his physicians say he is doing very well.

All hope that the Judge will have a speedy recovery, but even in that event he will not be able to take any part in his canvass for the nomination for circuit judge.

John Uri Lloyd, of Cincinnati, has consented to act as a guide for the Cary Club of Norwood to—make an all-day jaunt to the country when the weather gets balmy over the ground made famous by his story, "Stringtown-on-the Pike."—Florence.

it is about impossible to keep it in good condition when there has been a long rainy period like that of the last two months.

The horse that propels the stone cart on the Burlington and Florence pike, got gay last Saturday afternoon and ran oft, running from near Florence to the Sidney toll caused the trouble. They say the runaway was the most exciting scene in the history of the pike. Yery little damage resulted.

A Onesided Trade.

Several days ago, W. C. Weaver purchased two fine Poland Chimanale pigs from his neighbor, H. W. Rouse. The pigs were given nice, comfortable quarters at their new home, and were doing well, but when Mr. Weaver went, one morning, to leed them, he was surprised by the discovery that during the highty previous, some one had taken the finest one of the pair, and left a female of the same stock and about the same size, in its plaze. The mystery as to who made the trade remains unsolved, and in the meant time the female has died.

MENTER T. GRAVES.

Menter Thompson Craves was born Decomber 2, 1837, enlisted in the Confederate army in 1862, was married in 1890, joined Bullitts burg Baptist church in 1880, and or sure and the last list was pub.

deaning Two Candidates—One for Circuit Judge and One for Representative.

The time for putting up the coin having passed in each of the three races viz: for the nomination for appellate judge, for circuit judge and for representative of Boone county in the next Legislature, and Judge Lassing, Hon, J. W. Cammack and John W. Berkshire being the only ones who weighed in in their respective races, they will now have a clear field and will be declared by the proper party authorities the Democratic nominees for the offices they seek. The course pursued by their opponents is very pleasing to Messrs. Cammack and Berkshire. As for Judge Lassing he has been on easy street all the time, his old time political luck having remained with him. All prospects for any political excitement within the party this spring has been removed. When Judge Menefee was stricken two weeks ago it was evident that he could not recover in time to give his campaign personal attention, and it was decided that his recovery would be hastened by disabusing his mind of the race, and freeing himself of the worry incident to a political campaign. Senator Cammack made an energetic campaign from the time he announced himself a candidate, and made a good impression at every point visited in this county. His credentials of qualifications are all that could be demanded of a public servant, and the ermine will continue on worthy shoulders. Here's to you, Senator Cammack, and may you fill the bill exactly. Hon, J. C. Byland was in town Monday and left his card withdrawing from the race for Representative. The card will be found in another column, Judge Lassing will not have as easy sailing after being nominated as will Messrs. Cammack and Berkshire, but he will win out in November by a handsome majority.

If reports in our exchanges from the tobacco growing section of the State are true, Kentucky will produce by far in 1907, the largest tobacco crop in its history. County Unit Bill.

County Unit Bill.

The News has very straight and reliable information which has leaked from Frankfort that the County Unit Law in all of its provisions will be sustained by the Court of Appeals in an opinion which will be rendered in the several cases before it involving all of the points. Our information is to the effect that four of the six judges have agreed on this and that it is thought that the other two will finally concur with their associates although at present they are not fully satisfied with the constitutionality of the measure at all points. The decision is held up on account of Judge O'Rear being in Florida on account of his health. He will return in about two, weeks when the opinion will be handed down. There have been quite a number of lawyers who have taken the position that the law is unconstitutional and as there will be about twenty-five counties aflected by the decision it will be a matter of great importance.—Elizabethtown News.

THE TESTING OF GIDEON

SERMONETTE.

"Throw down the aitar of baal that thy Father hath and cut down the grove that is by it." Reform was to begin at home, and it was to be complete. No use for Gideon to appeal to the nation while his own family was under the shadow of the heathen altar and the festive grove lured to its licentious festivities.

The aitar to Baal which his father had erected must be thrown down. The grove which he had planted must be thrown down. The grove which the ground.

"save Israel from the hand of the Middanites?"
He could scarce check the shout of the could scarce check the shout of a clation and Joy as he passed along the familiar way, and he was tempted more than one as he passed some metabloot to proclam the deliverance he had been sent to achieve. But wisely he refrained only confiding, after he, had reached the sections of his own home, in one of his servants whom he could trust.

Late they had sat talking over all the wonderful experiences of the afternoon, and then had began laying plans as to how best to carry out God's will.

"And build an altar unto the Jord thy God upon the top of the roek in the ordered place and take the second builock, and offer a burnt sacrifice with the wood of the grove which thou shalt cut down."

As Gideon listened he became conscious that it was the voice of, God speaking to him. But what bold thing was this which he was commanding him to do. Not only would it arouse hostility among the members of his own household and those of his own people, but it would warnthe enemy and put them on their cuard, if it did not lead to an immediate attack.

And how could he expect to wiln and they sent word to the Amalakites and to all the neighboring peoples on the cast of the rebellion which had broken out among the Israelites. In response thereto a great army was guthered togather, and it came and encamped in the valley of Jezreel, which when the men of the army of Israel saw many of them began to be afrail, which thing troubled Gideon greatly. "Surely," he said to himself, "if God would give Israel the victory there must be other spirits in the hearts of our people."

And that night Gideon sought the Lord and said:

"If thou will save Israel by mine hand, as thou hast said, behold, I will put a fleece of wool in the floor; and if the dew be upon the fleece only, and if it be dry upon all the earth he-side, then shall i know that thou whits save Israel by mine-hand as thou hast said."

And Il was so; for he arose up early on the morrow, and thrust the fleece together, and wrinking the dew out, of the fleece, a lowfull of water. And Gideon said unto God: "Let not thine anger be hot saginst me, and I will speak but this once: let me prove, I pray thee, but this once with the fleece; and upon all the ground let there be dew." And God did so that night, so that Gideon did so that night, so that Gideon did so that night, so that Gideon the fleece, all open all the ground let there be dew." And God did so that night, so that Gideon the fleece, all open all the ground let there be dew." And God did so that night, so that Gideon the fleece and upon all the ground let there be dew." And God did so that night, so that Gideon the fleece, all open all the ground let there be dew." And God did so that night, so that Gideon the fleece and upon all the ground let there be dew." And God did so that night, so that Gideon the fleece as how the Lord was surely with him in the great condict which has before him.

THE ANDSTIC WALL.

The dearest daintiest, most artistic wall is a solid colored wall. It furnishes a perfect background for all kinds of pictures, it it throws them out in their correct proportions, and doss not detract from their artistic value. The solid colored wall is also much better as a background-for furniture, and harmonizes nuch more artistically with carpets and rugs than any other method of wall treatment. The less breaking up of color on a wall the more artistic it is.

The most successful form of the solid colored wall is an alabastined wall. There is as much difference between tinted walls, as there is between tinted walls, as there is between shoddy and all-wool gowns. The shoddy gown holds its color for a few days, while the all-wool keeps its color to the very least thread, so also in solid colored walls, there are shoddy walls and permanently colored walls which retain their color down to the very last particle. If there is wallapaper on the wall, soak it off with warm water, then go over the plaster after you have removed the paper with warm water to remove every trace of paste. Alloock's plasters stand to-day indersed by not only the highest medical authorities, but by millions of graterial patients who have proved their efficacy as a household remedy.

Why Farmers Grow Old Early.

Anyone who has lived on a farm does not need to he told the reason, for he knows of the strain under which the American farmer lives during the flye months of spring and summer, says Woody Blutchiason, M. D., in Harper's Monthly. His work-day is from four or five in the morning until eight or nine as night, including chores—16 to 17 hours of the hardest kind of physical labor, and every mister of it at high tension, especially during barvest. Then comes a pleriod of relaxation in the fall, the ope time in the year whyn de has just enough muscular exercise to keep him inhealth. Later, the whitely espacing with the spring and summer again. No wonder that by 45 he has had a sunstroke, and "can't stand the heat," or has "a weak back," or his heart gives and "can't stand the heat," or has "a weak back," or his heart gives out," or a chill "makes him rheumatic," and when you add to this furflows, muscular strain the fact that the far muscular strain the fact that the far muscular strain the fact that the far-mer sees his income put in peril every season, and his very home every bed year, so that each unfavorable changes in the weather sets his nerves on edge, it can be readily imagined that the real "quiet, peaceful country life" is something sadly different from the ideal.

Do We Change Our Size?

We all have read such phrases as "his form seemed to dilate," and "he suddenly looked mean and one does, under certain circumstances, as in offended dignity, extend the height, dilate the chest, and so become larger, and fear may cause a sort of collapse that makes one appear quite shrunken.
These are real and commonplace things ... There is something else aliled to the forgeging which is not hings. There' is something else alhings at There' is something else alhild to the foregoing which is not quite so simple, asys New York Weekly. We associate grand things with bigness, and mean-things with snallness. By some curious frick of our nervous system we no sooner learn that a person has done a noble deed than his form looks noble, and if we hear that the deed is mean his form appears mean. If another is proved intellectually excellent, we mark the width of his forehead. Should he subsequently do anything disgraceful, we think his forehead mean-looking. And, Indeed, we ourselves may feel broad or mean in brow, but all these things are mental illusions.

U. S. MARINES TO POLICE PORTS. Action of This Government Will Re lieve Foreign Countries of Making Naval Demonstration.

Making Naval Demonstration.

Washington, March 22.—Bluejackets and marines have been landed from the United States gunboat Marietta, at Trujillo and Celba, and probably at Puerto Cortex, Honduras, in order to protect American interests in those ports.

Advices to this effect were received at the nasy department from Commander Fullam, of the Marietta, and they were fat once transmittled to the state department.

As yet, no word has been received as to whether forces have been landed at Central American ports on the Parific coast side, but undoubtedly this step will be taken if American interests are considered in danger.

The navy department feels that the action of Commander Fullam brings the situation completely in hand so far as the safeguarding of trade justices in the safeguarding of trade justices in the protection given to Americans it is felt that the action of this government will relieve foreign governments of the necessity of taking any steps toward making a naval demonstration.

The landing of the bluejackets and marines and the policing of both shores of the Central American republics with United States gunhoats before trading vessels had been moleated in any manner, or fereign interests epopardized, is regarded here as a diplomatic move that will prevent any international complications growing out of the policy of the United States not to permit European demonstrations in Central American or South American waters.

From the meager dispatches received it is understood that Commander Fullam landed a force of about 20 magnes from the Marietta at Trujillo and 20 bluejackets at Celba and God continued his course to Puerto Cortez.

BUTTON THEIR OWN WAISTS.

Great Obstacie.

Marvelous as it may seem. New York women have lately discovered a way of fastening their waists up the back without celling for assistance. Thought not lacking in generosity, they became so thred of the outstretched palm of the chamhermaids that they now feel that it is time to guard their pockets. The Gotham woman discovered that if she put her hiouse on hind—side—before, with the sieves hanging free, it could be fastened from top to bottom, with the exception of the hooks at the neck, and then turned around and the arms slipped into the sieeves without unduly straining the fastenings. So simple: So strange that no one had thought of it before. Or is it possible other women have used the plan and meanly kept if to themelves? Will the waist that buttons in the hack now have a new lease of life?

Mr. Robert Odbert, a machinist, living at 201 Cameron. Street, Detroit, Mich, had a very distressing experience with rheumatism for about two years. He makes the following statement: "About the year 1887 I felt the effects of rheumatism which gradually grew worse until I was compelled to of '97 and '98 I was combed to my bed most of the time. I was under dectors' treatment but found no relief. My legs were swollen from the hips downward and red hotches appeared all over them. Frequently they pained me so that I had to hind them tightly with strips of linen. This sometimes relieved the pain but at other times failed to do so. At times I had to crawl to my work, using two crutohes. During these spells I suffered greatly from pain around my heart which I at tributed to the rheumatism.

Varnish Secret Lost.

The Cremona, varnish disappeared about 1760, and so far the Fecipe has not been rediscovered. Whether it was a gum or an oil or a distillation from some plant or a chemical is not known, nor how it was mixed. Many theories regarding it have been advanced from time to time, and Dod, who died in 1830, claimed to have rediscovered it. He employed others to make his violins, but always varnished them hinself. His varnish is very superior, and his violins command high prices. The varnishing and polishing of a violin are done usually by a woman, if requires time and practice, for the finest Instruments are gone over as often as 30 times.—March Circle. March Circle.

THE VICTORY OF GIDEON

IN ISRAEL
By the "Highway and Byway" Preacher

SERMONETTE.

SERMONETTE.

Quantity Versus Quality—Man trusts in numbers. Goddebends not on the number of mer, but the kind of men.
We can well imagine with what pride and confidence Gidcon passed through the long ranks of israel's army—Thirtytwo thousand men who had responded to the call.
Gideon saw victory in that army. God eaw defeat. Gideon saw 32,000 men ready to fight.
God saw 22,000 men with fearfull, frightend hearts ready to turn and run at the first approach of the enemy. Vez, and as he looked further he saw 9,000 men who were not downright in earnest—9,700 men who would not endure hardship and danger.

"One shall chase a thousand."

"One shall chase a thousand, and two shall put ten thousand to flight."

"Why? Because one with God is a majority, always. Victory in the world over evil is not dependent upon the strength of man, but the power of God. One man in whom the spirit of God easts is better than a whole army whose confidence is placed in the arm of flesh, alone. Had not Gideon elimbed up to the helghle of faith where he could see with clearer vision and feel the hea: Ckrot of God, he never could have stood there to deepled over two-thirds of his army melt away. Had he not stood henoically by God's side and feit the heart-throb-of his power he sever could have picked out that little band of 300 by the brook's side, and gone with them to face the vast army of the enemy. How many men are needed in a community, in a city, in a state, in a valid, and establishing the state of the service of the ser

"It was a Luther, persecuted and spaced by both church and state, who could bring about a reformation. It was a John Knox in Scotland and a Wilberforce in England, and a Moody in America who could change the currents of life towards righteouaness and truth.

Learn this lesson then from Gideon that it is by #ffire few in whom the spirit of food resto, rather than by the imultitudes that are called together by the popular movement, that victory is to be won over the hosts of the evil. It is quality and not quantity that counts.

Gideon's Methods.— How seemingly doolish frog the human standpoint. Trumpets, placed the seem of the evil. It is quality and not quantity that counts.

Gideon's Methods.— How seemingly good for the warm of the world with a continuity of the human standpoint. Trumpets, places the Divine wisdown washies with the was trategers which only faith in God could, have made, possible.— The man wine, real-see that he must fight in God's strength and not his own, is the simple, insignificant. WHAT a wave of enthusiasm that was which swept over that portion of israel whither the messengers of ofideon had gone. The story of his overthrow of Pagal and the cutting down of the grove, together with his call to israel to throw off the yoke aft the Midlanites, had stirred to new hope, and fighting, men. out. of the tribes of Manasseh, Asher. Zebuhu and Naphthall quickly railled around the standard which Gldeon had set up. There is encouragement and enthusiasm in numbers, and as the little nucleus which Gldeon had set the first gathered about him grew to be 1,000, and then 5,000, hen 10,000, then 10,000, then 20,000, on still they were coming in, the spirits of the men rose until Gldeon was scare able to restrain them from an immediate advance upon the enemy, which at the first warning of trouble in israel, had been gathering in the valley of Jee-reel.

It was not strange in the face of the men and heard their words of

"Surely we could not fail to bin

That night a council of war was Again came the questioning in Gideon's heart, again the doubt as to wisdom of further reducing his army, and then, as before, came the thought:

"But God hath spoken, He knoweth how he will do this thing."

And again in obedience to the command of the Lord, Gideon ordered the advance of his army down to the stream.

Gideon reached the brink of the river in advance of his men, and turned to receive them, wondering the while what the Lord's purpose was concerning them. And the word of the Lord came to him again, saying:

"Everyone that lappeth of the water with his tongue as a dog lappeth, him shelt thou set by himself; likewise every one that boweth down upon his knees to drink."

Instantly Gideon saw the purpose of God. He would discover who was so infect upon the Lord's ousliness as to keep his eye upon the enemy while hastily rofreshed himself with the cool water. And instend of being dismayed when he saw the little band of 300 men, his faith tald hold of God with new power, and he knew that victory was to be his.

It Takes Nerve

Nerve

Everything depends upon your nerves. It is nerve force that causes the brain to direct the motion of your body; it is nerve force that causes your heart to pulsate, and send the blood through your veins; it is nerve force that causes your stomach to digest food, your kidneys to filter the blood, and the liver to secrete bile.

In fact, nerve force is the power that runs your body, so if you feel worn-out, irritable, nervous, cannot sleep, or eat well, have pain or misery, anywhere, your nerves are weak, and your system rundown. To restore this vitality, take Dr. Miles' Nervine which will strengthen and build up the nerves. You cannot be healthy without strong nerves.

"For eighteen years Dr. Miles' Nervine which will strengthen and build up the nerves. You cannot be healthy without strong nerves. Those who are engaged perfecting the tobacco pool are making a special effort to secure the pledging of the 1907 crop, a very large per cent of which is now signed. In some counties only a few growers who expect to realize a big price for their crop by remaining out of the pool, are unsigned, but they are so few and far between that they will not be able to command the attention of the independent buyers.

The Lawrenceburg levee has successfully stood the test of a second flood. No more severe test could be given than what it has gone through this winter. It seemed to endure the second flood even better than the first, for in this second test there were no slips and no apparent unusual amount of leakage at its inside-base. The city is to be congratulated. The cost of the levee has been more than saved this winter. The damage that would have been incurred by these two floods alone would have been incar-culable.—Lawrenceburg Press.

This is obtained by painting the surface of the egg to represent the closely folded petals of a rich red rose and fastening about its lower end a bunch of green tissue paper leaves, the long polity being wired to hold them in place about the egg. Such eggs are unique and pretty to adorn the breakfast table Easter morning, placing one on the folded white napkin at each plate. No. 2 shows an egg representing our idea of a "cranky" Annit Nan, long-faced and of sour mien. A bit of white law, closely folded to fit the egg, forms her cap. A large potation of the egg, forms her cap. A large potation must also be covered with white law. The features are drawn in, first, very carefully with the penell, then planted with water colors. No. 3 is the head of a jolly "chaple," whose hat may be of straw or made of plaited tissue paper. The collar is cut from ordinary white note-paper and a bit of black or gay ribben forms the necktic. These "Easter egg greetings," as the little fellow was wont to call them, were daintily wraped in pretty dissue papers, tied with bits of bright ribbons and placed in white pasteboard boxes, to be sent on Easter eve 'p his many friends, who, you may be surewer delighted to receive them.

A German housemald, being very fond of her mistress little children and wishing to add a bit of homely cheer to their Easter title, decided to follow a quaint and pretty custom observed in many provinces of Germany, Early on Easter moraling—before one of the family was astir—she stole out on the lawn and hid—little neats which she had secretly made during her spire hours) under shrubs, trees, behind vince and flower pots and in every conceivable corner of the yard. In these mests, fashlomed of straw, twiga and twine, she placed—the freshest of eggs, which were to be cooked for Easter breakfast. And the cooking was done out of doors in a kettle placed over a rude camp fire for the burpose.

INIQUITOUS WORKING OF

The farmers of the contral, whetern and southwestern states have for the past two or three years been organizing with the object of increasing the price of their products by string the minimum price for which the producers shall sell. There are two organizations, one the Society of Equity, and the other known as "Farmers Valions," but both appear to have the same end in view. It naturally must occur to the farmer who investigates the tariff law, that it has been created for the benefit of the manufacturer and that the farmer gets, not only no benefit, but is a great loser, for the protected trusts, into which most manufacturers are combined, charge enormous extra profits on what be buys, because the tariff protects them in so doing. If the members of the Society of Equity and the Farmers' Unions arrive at that conclusion, they will, as a matter of self-protection, vote to have the tariff revised, so as to abolish this unjust protection to the few at the expense of the many.

Republicans Attack Reform.

Senator Carter of Montana in his vicious attack upon Secretary Hitch-cock undoubtedly has the sympathy of all the land thieves and grafters, and nearly a hundred of these when have been convicted of land frauds no donbt endorse what Carter says of the secretary's policy as being, "unwarranted in fact and founded on baseless suspicion." Mr. Harriman viows this activity of Secretary Hitchcock with great displeasure, since the Union Pacific and one of its coal companies have been indicted in Utah for land grabbing. And the list of objectors might be almost indefinitely extended to all who have been in the land grafting business. Senator Carter pretends to be fighting for the homestead settler, but no honest settler who has compiled with the law need fear the inspection of the land department, and if any have been inconvenienced it is because the land thleves have compleded the government to investigate the honest as well as dishonest to discover who is entitled to the benefit of the land iaws. Quite possibly sommistakes have been made and Secretary Hitchcock may have been overzealous in trying to punish the guilty to prevent the government land from being diverted from honest settlers in persons and corporations.

Senator Carter's attack on the only the prevent the government land from being diverted from honest settlers in persons and corporations. Senator Carter's attack on the only department of the government that has without fear or favor criminally punished the grafters, would indicate that his faterests lie in close proximity to some other interests that have been disturbed. Is he acting as the spokesman or attorney of the land grabbers, or is he trying to disorganize and thow discredit on the only true reform efforts that have been made by his party, so that the "reactionaries" may control the ready to stand by those—even their political opponents—who are honesty striving for the reform of great abuses, especially the land frauds that have flourished in the land department under

That is the Stery of a Michigan Farmer, Who Lives in Western Ganada.

Olds, Alberta, Dec. 16, 1906.
Mr. M. V. Moinnea, Detroit, Michigan:
Dear Sir and Friend—It will be four roams next May since I came to Olds, and have lived here ever since.

Since i, come here wheat has run from 25' to 45 bb. per acre, oats from 5' to 155' that J. know of. I raised that last year, 115 be. to the acre of the fibest oats I ever saw, and oats that I sowed 3'six day of May this year went 12's in the acre and weighted 41' lbs. to the bushel. My barley went 40 bu. hast year and 50 this year, and was not sown until the latter part of May. I had 3 acres of potatoes this year and 55td 700 bushels and put 375 bu. in the cellar, and no bugs to pick.

We have a fine Government Creamery at Olds. Our, cows made 41 per head and I oldinit feed any grain; only prairie hay, so you see we are doing well. be alve the patent for our homestead now and am very thankful that we came to Alberta. We have made a little over $1,000 each, year beather making our living. I would not go back to Michigan to live for anything. If I had my choise of a ticket to Olds or a 40-acre farm in Michigan I would take the ticket and in two years I could buy any of them 40-acre farms. This is the country for a poor man, as well as a man with money.

I will close, thanking you for our prosperity. I remain yours truly, (Signed) OTTO YETTINO, Olds, Alberta, Canada. Box 159. Information as to how to secure low rates to the free grant lands of any Canadian Government agents.

A phonographic device that will call the police by stelephone adds a new hazard to the dangers of the burglars' profession. When an attempt is made to force a window or door with which the proper connections have been made an electric current operates a phonograph in the garret. The machine calls up central and asks for the police station. The phonograph then informs the officers of the robbery, giving street and number, and repeats this information as long as the receiver is down. Meantime, the intruder, all unconscious that an alarm has been rung in, virtually walks into a trap, and if the call is promptly responded to its soon in the lockup.

After nodding his approval of the grand plane and the furniture he frowned at the tancciored window shades. "Must be green." He was assured that a change would be made especially for him the next day. At Bwe clock is the morning Rosenthal, clad only in his pajamas, came scurrying excitedly down stairs and into the office, where the drowsy night clerk was nodding at the desk. "Ze street cars! Noise! Must stopped! Nervous me! I cannot sleep."

The clerk hurriedly sent for Manager Gustaw Mann, and Mann spent two hours telling Rosenthal funny stories in German trying to divert his mind while the clerk was upstairs squaring the management for waking a guest on the Gongh street side as a gas pipe had burst under the floor and had to be repaired!

PE-RU-NA A MEDICAL COMPOUND

First, there must be a due proportion of the ingredients. Each drug in the pharmacopeia has its special action. To combine any drug with other drugs that have alightly different action, the combination must be made with strict reference to the use for which the compound is intended. The drugs may be well selected as to their efficacy, but the compound ENTIRELY SPOILED BY THE PROPORTION in which they are combined.

It takes years and years of experience to discover this proportion. There is no law of chemistry, of pharmacy, by which the exact betance of proportion can be determined. EXPERIBNET IS THE ONLY GUIDE.

In compounding a catarrh remeely Dr. Hartman has had many years' experience. In the use of the various ingredients which compose the catarrh remedy, Peruna, he has learned, little by little, how to harmonize the action of each ingredient, how to combine them into a stable compound, how to arrange them into such nice proportions as to blend the taste, the operation and the chemical peculiarities of each several ingredient in order to produce a pharmacentical product beyond the criticism of doctors, pharmacists or chemists.

WE REPEAT, THAT AS MUCH DEPENDS ON THE WAY IN WHICH THE DRUGS ARE COMBINED AS DEPENDS UPON THE DRUGS THEM-SELVES.

The compound must present a stability which is not affected by changes of temperature, not affected by exposure to the sir, not affected by age. It must be so combined that it will remain just the same whether used in the logging or mining camps of the northwest or the coffee plantations of the tropics.

A complete list of the ingredients of Peruna would not enable any druggist or physician to reproduce Peruna. It is the skill and sagacity by which these ingredients are brought together that give Peruna much of its peculiar claims as an efficacious catarrh remedy.

an efficacious catarrh remedy.

However much virtue each ingredient of Peruna may possess, the value of the compound depends largely upon the manner and proportion in which they are combined. The right ingredients, put together rightly, is the only way a medical compound can be made of real value.

A curious point in regard to the new dogs act occupied the attention of the Carnorvan county beach on Saturday, says the London Daily Mall. The superintendent reported that eight persons had applied for exemptions in respect of dogs which were used for churning, lissard Davids inquired whether it had not been decided that to use dogs for such a purpose was crustly, but sayeral of his collesgues replied in the negative. The bench decided that the owners of the churning dogs must take out licenses.

One of the Important Duties of Physicians and the Well-Informed of the World

is to learn as to the relative standing and reliability of the leading manufacturers of medicinal agents, as the most eminent physicians are the most careful as to the uniform quality and perfect purity of remedies prescribed by them, and it is well known to physicians and the Well-Informed generally that the California Fig Syrup Co., by reason of its correct methods and perfect equipment and the ethical character of its product has attained to the high standing in scientific and commercial circles which is accorded to successful and reliable houses only, and, therefore, that the name of the Company has become a guarantee of the excellence of its remedy.

TRUTH AND QUALITY

Appeal to the Well-Informed in every walk of life and are essential to permanent success and creditable standing, therefore we wish to call the attention of all who would enjoy good health, with its blessings, to the fact that it involves the question of right living with all the term implies. With proper knowledge of what is best each hour of recreation, of enjoyment, of contemplation and of effort may be made to contribute to that end and the use of medicines dispensed with generally to great advantage, but as in many instances a simple, wholesome remedy may be invaluable if taken at the proper time, the California Fig Syrup Co. feels that it is alike important to present truthfully the subject and to supply the one perfect laxative remedy which has won the appoval of physicians and the world-wide acceptance of the Well-Informed because of the excellence of the combination, known to all, and the original method of manufacture, which is known to the California Fig Syrup Co. only.

This valuable remedy has been long and favorably known under the name of syrup of Figs—and has attained to world-wide acceptance as the most excellent of family laxatives, and as its pure laxative principles, obtained from Senna, are well known to physicians and the Well-Informed of the world to be the best of natural laxatives, we have adopted the more elaborate name of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—as more fully descriptive of the remedy, but doubtless it will always be called for by the shortest name of Syrup of Figs—and to get its beneficial effects always note, when purchasing, the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package, whether you simply call for—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—as—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—as—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—as—syrup of the same heretofore known by the name—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—as—Syrup of Figs and El

Walton, Saturday, April oth, at 1 o'clock for the purpose of allotting the stock, in corporating and organizing. All persons who have subscribed for stock or spoken for stock, or desire to take stock, will please be present either in person or brown, and the territory to be served, and especially within eight miles of Walton, who desire stock, will avail themselves of the opportunity by that day. After the stock is allotted it will, of course, be private property. The bank will open for business September 2d, at which time all the stock will have to be paid for in full and nothing will be required to be paid dupon the stock until September 2d.

We think Walton is a splendid point for the business contemplated, and that there is plenty of business in the territory to be served, which will make this institution both profitable and useful without any injury, whatever to any other bank. It is the purpose to stay within safe and conservative business lines and yet to be as liberal with the public as the character of the business will justify.

FARM AND TOWN.

The census office estimates that within a few years 50 per cent of the population of the United States will be urban and dwelling in cities of 8,000 inhabitants and upward. The farm is deserted that the town may be congested. Man is a gregarious animal, and it is natural that he should seek the society of his fellows, but rural life has both advantages and pleasures, and something ought to be done to stop the drain from the farm to swell the current of the city.

It is possible that during the last century the American farmer was the most improvident and wasteful man on earth. The useless sums he put in fences that could have been advantageously dispensed with would pay every national debt in the world twice over. This folly caused a vandat waste of forests that would be in valuable today had they been spared; but the American farmer impoverished the soil in the same impoverished the same in the Meville pendel shover were out buggy riding. The useless sun's he put in fences that could have been advantageously dispensed with would pay every national debt in the world twice over. This folly caused a vandal waste of forests that would be invaluable today had they been spared; but the American farmer impoverished the soil in the same reckless fashion that he destroyed the forest. There was waste, waste, waste everywhere.

And now a generation has been born to the farm taat flust practice thrift even as their fathers committed desolation. Farming is a business that calls for brains and culture. No man is fit for the farm that cannot get from it profit, pleasure, conquest. He must battle with drouth, with weed, with insect. He must know when to plant and how to plant, when to cultivate and how to cultivate, when to harvest and how to harvest, and surely more than one-half of the population of such a land as ours ought to find homes on the farm.

Just now the land owning farmer is prosperous. His trouble is scarcity of labor, though labor saving machinery has wrought wonders for the farm. The American manufacturer, has robbed the farm of its labor for the shop, and the figures are startling.—Washington Post.

The names of the family are Headache, Toothache, Earache, Backache, Stomach ache, Neuralgia, etc. They are sentingls that warn you of any derangement of your system. When the brain nerves become exhausted or irritated, Headache makes you miserable; if the stomach nerves are weak, indigestion results, and you double up with pain, and if the more prominent nerves are affected, Neuralgia simply makes life unendurable. The Maysville Bulletin, which understands the tobacco situation in Kentucky thoroughly, announces: "By the increased acreage in the burley belt a great mistake is being made if the farmers hope to win by the American Society of Equity. By this increase the growers have made the very move desired by the trust, which has now entered the fight in earnest. The trust has a large supply of tobaccon hand, and with the increased acreage will have a much larger field to work in in 1907 than herefore. During the year 1906 about 200,000,000 pounds of burley were grown in the State, and good prices grown in the State, and good prices district it is now feared that an overproduction will result and the price will fall."

The Owenton Democrat of last

The Owenton Democrat of last week says: "The child is born. After eleven months of investigation by expert Harris and assistants, he made his report to the Piscal court showing how much, according to his findings, the various ex-Sheriffa of Owen county are indebted to the county on secount of moneys collected and never paid over to the county treasury. The following are his figures which were submitted to the Fiscal court Monday.

Total "Steepers." Interest and penalties Due the County from the Ex-Sheriff for whom the Treasurer, J. Holbrook, has been instructed to make a demand for same to be paid. J. W. Gayle, Ex-Sheriff, 839,983.13. W. P. Swope, Ex-Sheriff, 83,983.13.

993.13. W. P. Swope, Ex-Sherift, 89,800,13.

The Fiscal court was in session all day Monday in consultation with its attorneys and during the day came to terms with W. W. Dickerson of the firm of Clore, Dickerson & Clayton, of Cincinnati, by which they become the chief attorneys to the case of suits to be brought. An agreed fee was arranged with them as well as with Carroll, Jackson, & Carter, of New Castle & Lawrenceburg. Each of these firms of lawyers are to receive and one half per cent of all, the moneys collected where there is a contest, and five per cent where there is no contest. If an answer is filed to any of the suits brought that will constitute a contest. The fees are evidently very reasonable and the counsel are among the best lawyers in the state. These attorneys have arranged to meet in Owenton on one day the last of next week and prepare and bring these suits against the various exsheriffs mentioned.

"The Tyranny of the Roof."

We think of the savage title as ilving outdoors, and free from, the restraints which come from rivillization—the garment, the—house and the cook. But there is a barbarism which spends its winters in buts and holes from which every beach of fresh air is shut, out, and whore the stilling atmosphere is heavy with "old shapes of foul disease." Akin to the life of the home of whatever grade where cold is dreaded more than bad air. The farmhouse, the millionaires palace and the villinge grocery alike shelter miserable sincers against the ravages of con sumption has awakened thorisaids to the fact that the need for pure air is more imperative even than the need for good food, although it speaks with a less insistent visice. But, remarks Youth's Coupsaine, hundreds of thousands of homsewives yet need to learn the danger of the comfortable doublewindow, and the air-tight stove, and the heafing power of pure, cold air, steeped in God's own sunshine. A woman'who was known as the queen of the Gypsies died recently in England. She was of great age and amating vigor, and a real "character"—inher reserve and her hatred of modern conditions. She seldom talked, but it was known that she considered education as rubbish, houses as no better than prisons, and the persons who died in them. as the victims of their own effeminacy. In a phrase both telling and memorable, she boasted herself "free from the tyranny of the root," That is truly noble freedom and one which every wise woman may covet for herself and her children.

English Manufacturers and Workme Because of Our Protection Policy, Get Much Profit Really Be-longing to America.

The bureau of statistics of the de-nartment of commerce and labor coasts that "cotton and its products coasts that "cotton and its products croasts resciteatly $500,000,000 Into the United States from foreign coun-ries in the year just ended." Of this arge sum we exported but $43,000,000 of f manufactured goods, although we aroduced three-fourths of the cotton supply of the world and at the same rocured three-fourths of the cotton supply of the world and at the same time rinported about $55,000,000 of nauntactured cotton goods, mostly room Europeaa conntries to which the builk of the raw cotton was exported, it would seem there is not so much to boast about in this trade of cotton, for, although we sold $173,000,000 of aw cotton to England, and from elsewhere that country imported enough more to make the total $275,000,000. The exports of cotton manufactures were about $432,000,000.

The English manufacturers and workmen therefore made $145,000,000 and owners about $430,000,000. The exports of the products including the cost of the raw cotton, was only $43,000,000, and we bought back of manufactured cotton products including the cost of the raw cotton, was only $43,000,000, and we bought back of manufactured cotton goods was $25,000,000 good the balance of trade on manufactured cotton goods was $25,000,000 and of the same and the value comes chiefly out of the earth and the hard labor of the southern planter planter in the principal part of our raw cotton was manufactured adjacent to the southern cotton fields and then said enough the principal part of our raw cotton was assuring beeting of incoming the principal part of our raw cotton was manufactured adjacent to the southern beet of the southern planter of the southern planters of the southern planters buy more manufactured cotton than we soil?

The Republican policy of protecting the trusts and manufacturers is an expensive luxury, as it allows them to make coormous profits out of the American people, but very little out of foreigners, who, under a fairer system, would be their best customers. The southern cotton krowers and the western wheat farmers are in the same boat, they are unprotected, they must sell at the world's prices, but are compelled by the tariff system to pay to others the protection tax on all they buy, and on this policy the Republicans sy "stand pat," and refuse to even consider any bill that will revise the tariff.

Punishing Our Best Customer.

In the year ending Jane 30, 1906, our exports to Greet Pirtuin muonated to $678,923,505, while to Germany-see exported $122,402,705. The Brilish were more than twice the better customers; more than twice the better customers; more than tree times better. We should be $146,175,015 white, we sold to Canada. Yet we are asked to make tailf concessions to a country that has marked up its tariff rates against our exports, and to do it merely for the sake of having those rates marked down to their original basis, but not to the country that receives more than double the quantity of our exports and levies no tariff at all on them? We are asked to give to German manufactured products a lower tariff rate than that which we exact upon similar products from the United Kingdom; to buy less from Great Britain and more from Germany. That is precisely what would be the effect of a maximum and instrument ariff scheme; and that is what we shall avoid doing if, instead, we adopt the minimum mand maximum plan. If for no other reasons in abundance—we should base our dual ariff system upon a fixed and irreducible minimum.

Berestdge tried to trot in the millionaire class, but found himself outside the distance flag when the other senators had passed the wire, thence he is disconsolate and thinks it is impossible to compete in the race for the millionaire class, for it costs too much for the necessary keep and training. Beveridge is unfortunate in having had the idea pumped into him in Indians that he belongs to the 2:01 class, when he really is only eligible for the 2:40 trot, or pace, or goas-you-please. A Grafting Quartette. It is as easy as failing of a log to make money. If you only know how, and bave no acruples about the moral side of the question. Mr. Harriman, Mr. George J. Gould, Mr. Mortimer L. Schiff, and Mrs. James Stillman, own-ling practically all the stock of the Chicago & Alton railway, voted them selves a dividend of 30 per-cent. Thus, having cleaned out the treasury, they voted to issue bonds and stock, which they bought at their own price and immediately disposed of at much higher figures. In fact, after the looting was over, only $22,500,000 of the initiation can be anyway accounted for, and they appear to have divided $61, 300,000, which represented nothing. As to the first three named, it is perhaps not surprising, but that Mr. James Stillman, the president of the National City hank, the greatest bank in the United States, is controlled by those Republican patriots, tho Standard Oli magnates—well, no wonder is sick in Paris and thus evades $50, panistons.

Partial Prosperity.

Let us see! The Republicans de-clare we are more prosperous than ever before and that the tariff is the cause of our prosperity. The Demo-crats admit there is great prosperity to? the trusts and corporations, and acknowledge that the tariff has pro-tected them, but not the great mass of the people—the consumers. If the consumers were prosperous they would be saving money and the de-posits in the savings banks would hay for easing, but. instead of this being the case, savings banks deposits are posite in the same same same same that are reason, but instead of this being the case, savings hanks' deposits are secreasing. Are the tariff-taxed people who pay the tariff-protected trusts such high priese shilged to draw out, some of their money to make both ands meet, because their incomes have not kept pace with the increased cost of living, which is advancing at the average annual rate of five per cent, and over, or 55 per cent, during the past ten years? # VIEW ON SOCIALISM BY A UNIVERSALIST.

Following is an extract from a sermon delivered by Rev. C. C. Conner, of Barre, Vt., on Socialism, in response to the question, "What is the attitude of the Universalist church toward Socialist propaganda?"

wersalist church toward Socialist propaganda?"
"The Universalist church cannot consistently lend itself to any party, as a party, but it will once and again champion the cause of men. Toward the Socialists as men, it has the kindliest feeling; toward them as a class of men contending for their rights, it carries its prayers and would extend its hand of help; toward them as laborers for the good of all the world, it would speak a Christian approval and would cooperate with them unto such great ends; toward them as class arraying themselves against another class, it may have to offer some consideration and caution.

"There are evils in the industrial and commercial world which we must recognize. The bulk of them perhaps inheres in capitalism, but all of them may not be there. A system is responsible for much. It gets a grasp on an order of things, and men may be for a time apparently powerless. But men were not meant to be masterful and free.

"Reform is not wrought by arraying system against system or party against party. We must have the sense of right hiving and strong in men, and it must advise their voices and direct their feet and hands. We need more religion in polities. We want nobler men in state and nation. We must attain and precepts of Christ. He makes men righteous by His love and truth, and men then make the better nation.

"None may be just right in dividing humanity into classes. It

None may be just right in dividing humanity into classes. It may so appear on the surface; but there are not the fundamental hidistructions which we may imagine. We cannot say with whole truth that a part of the world are workers and the others are not. There may be for a time some idlemen, but the rule is that all men shall be workers. Fortunes are built up about wise management and unrelenting labor, and rich men have confessed with Stephen Girard that their happiness was in their work and not in their riches. Fortunes have stayed rarely in the line of generations. Rich men have had, as a rule, profligate or generous sons and daughters. These did not keep what their fathers had accumulated. The wealth of men as come bake to the earth for a redistribution and has been catived again by the four winds. We don't see the end of the present manimoth jorlunes, the like of which never rolled up in a former age. But the end shall come to each. Men do not get, maybe, in their today everything the deserve; but no may can work as once of lasting good to us, or of real joy to us, which bears a vital relation to our own life and work.

"There are certain handicaps the structure of the profession of the professi None may be just right in dividing humanity into classes. It real joy to us, which is the counterpart of ourselves, which bears a vital relation to our own life and work.

"There are certain handicaps on some. These a Christian civilization is to remove, that in the language of the Socialist platform
'all opportunities shall be open and equal to all men.' But everyone should first beware of the handicaps which may be self-imposed, in habits of life which are expensive and bad, authrifty and unwise. No social system shall be able to put and keep about a man that of which he is not personally worthy.

"Great differences in fortune, or in the comforts of life, intrude and persist in the absence of the spirit of Christ among men, or in the failure of men to entertain it or live by it. That spirit is going abroad in the carth as never before. The Christ is knocking at many doors, and he is finding welcome. Rich men are going to do more which shall consecrate their possessions to the general good. Employers are going to do more for the employed. In many factories already the profitsharing system is in operation.
And men shall be brought to their own as they are qualified to come to it. We are to make ready for the kingdom in our midst. We are to live the life o + it."

"At the close the speaker assured the working men of the cooperation of many forces in their behalf, and asked them to con't the church as chief among their friends, and to turn to it- for-itsmessage and its spirit and its help.

Magnetic Pole Not Stationary.

Amundson, the Norwegian explorer, is in Paris, where he has been ilonized, made a Commander of the Legion of Honor and brought before various scientific bodies. In his interesting talks he tells much about his experiences in the polar region, including his discovery of the northwest passage, through which he sailed, although that was a secondary consideration. Amundsen joeth three years in the north, 19 months of which were devoted to making careful observations, day and night, of the massmeter pole. He fluds that the pole is not stationary, but while he has a vast amount of dafa on hand the exact results have not yet been completely figured out. At all events, says the Troy Times, new scientific knowledge has been gained which will be of much value to the world, even if the northwest passage shall prove impracticable for ordinary commercial purposes. And if the pole is an desillating point there may be an explanation as to the failure of so many seekers to find that elusive object.

Getting the First Thousand.
Get the first $1,000. After that money making is easy." This is the old-time, sage advice of the hardheeded, self-made man. That axioms has set many men to saving. They fix uporythat sum as the glittering, far-off forand of a fortune some time to be made. To a man on a small salary, say out of which something can be saved weekly without too much deprivation—the advice is good. There is something in it that acts as a stimulus to economy, declares the Denver Republican. And who will deny that economy is a good thing or that any truth that lights the way to it should not be known? Many men, therefore, have been buoyed up in their economies by the belief that the first $1,000 is the bardest to get, and that afterward all the rest would be easy and the good things of the world that follow a bounteous supply of monely would be within easy reach.

Although the "eternal city" figures so extensively in ancient and modern history, it has been the capital of Italy for less, than 50 years, a fact that will probably surprise many persons. The Italian government dates the acquisition of Rome as the capital city from March 27, 1861, and is preparing to observe the semi-centualial analysis. from March 27, 1861, and is preparing to observe the semi-centennial anniversary in 1811. One of the projects in contemplation in connection with the observance is to create a new port which will be Rome's exit to the sea. The idea is to make this port one of the largest and best equipped in the world.—Italy is growing as a commercial power, and Rome itself is getting-into the swing of modern trade. The new and improved facilities no doubt will be of much importance in promoting the material interests of the nation and city. promoting the mate

It will certainly be news to most people, says the London Globe, that New York is a short cut for telegrams between London and Paris and London and Berlin. However, the fact is vouched for. The messages are received at an agreed address in New York and are immediately passed on for London, Paris or Berlin, as the case may be. The reason for this amazing roundabout to save time is curtous. New York time being about six hours behind European time, its wire connections with Europe are almost unoccupied during the London forenoon, while during the same time European wires are often congested. Via New York, therefore, is a "short cut," but an expensive one.

BY STOPPING PORT BOMBAROMENT

Washington, April 4.—Mr. Corea, the Niceraguan minister, galled at the retard department and inquired as towhat authority Pulip I. Brown, secretary of the American legation to Guatemala, had for his interference with the hombardment of Amujakaia, Honduras, by the Niceraguan forces. Such interference on his part is a radical step, and all Central American republics are much interested in the outcome. State department officials have Ferhsed to disclose what Mr. Brown's Instructions have been. President Honilla. of Honduras, is still surrounded at Amapaia, so far as the state department homes, but the bombardment of the town by Nicaraguan gunboats has ceased, according to dispatches received from Philip I. Brown, secretary to the American legation to Guatemala and Honduras. The United States cruiser Chicago and the gunboat Princeton are both known to be lying near the island on which Amapaia is situated, and the presence of these iwas American warships is supposed to be largely responsible for the balt-in the bombardment.

Puerto Cortez, Honduras, March 28, via New Orleans, Laz, Ajurli 4.—The intentions of the United States in landing marines on the Honduran coast, and the evident Latitude granted them in protecting foreign life and property, is exciting much comment here. It has been remarked as especially significant that the American landing parties, not only here, but at Celba and Trnjillo, have in each instance placed a Hotchkiss gun, which they took ashore with them, so as to sweep the seaward approach.

The foreigners believe that this means the inited states will not permit the ports to be bombarded, in asmuch as 90 per cent, of the houses here and at Celba belong to foreigners, cannon shot fired into either place would do most damage to foreigners owned property. It is believed that in case of these two ports, Nicarasuan junboats will be kept off by the Hotchkiss guns, while at Trujillo, despite the fact that it is a Honduran port, the Honduran gunboat will be kept off by the Hotchkiss guns, while at Trujillo, despite the fact that it is a Honduran port, the Honduran port, the Honduran gunboat will not be allowed to bombard in any attempt to recapture the port from the Nicara-dians. Both countries are treated impartially in this respect.

STATESMEN SEEM FOND OF JUVENILE READING

JUST off the rotunds of the capitol is a little nook that is an especial object of interest to visiting tourists when congress is in season. It is the capitol terminus of the underground railway to the congressional tibrary. Books are constantly arriving over this subway line for senators, representatives and supremeount judges. They are delivered on their written order.

One would get a rather startling impression of the class of books the natesmen on Capitol hill are partial to from a casual inspection of the list of books that are drawn out in their names. For instance, the scholarly lienty Chot Lodge of the old 'by state, according to the record, recently book out such instructive and thrilling productions as "Jimmy the Brootback," "The Boy Capitali" and "Little Joe," by James Otts. Mr. Foraker of Ohio is charged with seythrilling productions as "Jimmy the Inforthack," "The Boy Capitalm and "Little Joe," by James Otla. Mr. Foraker of Ohio is charged with several volumes by "Old Sleuth" and "The Starry Flag," by Oliver Optic. Mr. Tillman, if the card tells the truth, has been perusing Thomas Pailey Aldrich's "Story of a Bad Boy" and some of W. Clark Russell's thrillling sea tales, including "Tbe Frozen Pirate."

Mr. Aldrich, the tactical leader of the Republicans, bas been mixing Old Sleuth with Dottle Dimple stories and tales of Indian adventure.

"Uncle Joe" Cannen, the speaker of the house, evidently is fond of detective stories, having oalled for "The Clique of Gold" and several of Gaborian's works.

It would appear from circumstantial evidence that nearly every member of both houses of congress and most of the learned judges of the supreme court are confirmed readers of invenile-literature, but such in reality is not the case. The pares and messengers are the ones who read this class of books. They get a sensitive of member to sign an order and then filtriout for the book they want. An official record is kept, however, of all books drawn out of the case gressional library and some fattra historian, it was pointed out, might obtain queer autons of the class of reading natifier that found most favor with the statesmen of the present day.

STUDY OF THE NEGRO AS SLAVE AND FREEMAN

An important investigation of the st now being made by the department of economics and sociology of the Carnegie institution of Washington, which was founded by Andrew Carnegie. This investigation will be of great importance to the negro as well as the white race, as it will show what the negro has done and what he is capable of doing. The work is being conducted by Alfred Holt Stone, an educated business man from Mississippi, who is a thorough, impartial and candidatudent of the economic development growing out of negro slavery and the work of the negro under conditions of freedom.

Mr. Stone has outlined a treatment, switch is reasonably exhaustive, relating to the economic life of the American—negro, without treepassing on either the political or social aspects of the twices. He recognizes the difficulty of treating the one as separated from the other two topics, but the desirability of such a method is believed to more than outweigh the difficulties involved in its execution.

Mr. Stone will treat of the condition of laboring classes during the American colonial period—the introduction of negro slavery into America as an economic factor. He will also investigate the efforts to utilize alsave labor in manufacturing and other industrial enterprises. His work will constitute an exceedingly important and novel feature in American economic history.

He will also treat of the negro as a free man, the result and development of the negro industrial school, their effect with reference to local economic conditions, the negro land owner and all such topics as will bring out clearly and fully the whole industrial relation of the negro to economic conditions.

This investigation will be comprehensive in its scope, and it will be at least a year before such progress has been made as will justif port on this important subject.

But that is not the Democratic way. The trend of the these repeis mystery and silence. For that is the program of the Republican feaders.

John Sharp Williams, speaking as the Democratic leader in the house of representatives when he said: "We are not simply anti-protectionists. We are not free traders. Our purpose is revenue.
We would not inaugurate protectionism where it does not now exist. We would remove it wherever it does exist, as rapidly as it can safely be

JUSTICE MUST BE DONE.

People and the Railroad Magnates the Bar.

Three or four months ago it was said in these columns that Mr. Harriman would soon find he "would have to come off his high perch" and face an outraged people. This forecast has in part come true, for we now find this superior being "who belongs to a higher sphere" saying: "I bave made up my m'nd to give in future-more attention to the interest of the public in those affairs." This may be just talk of Harriman to bridge over the pressey tight place he is in, but it will certainly be to his interests to leave undone many things he says be would like to do, for the people mean business. The determination to no longer be plundered by Harriman and other railroad magnates is not a fleeting shadow that the people are gazing, after, nor will they be satisfied with anything less than a full measure of justice.

It is not Mr. Harriman the people so much dislike, for he is but of today, and to-morrow will not be, but the system that such as he have developed for building up great fortunes at the expense of the great masses of the people who bave been compelled to pay exobitant. railroad charges.
